Trailers Move Canada's Perishables

Canada's perishable food supply is moving over the highway in mechanically refrigerated stainless steel trailers. As a result farm products are reaching Canadian tables fresher and more palatable. Food products are transported at proper temperatures. Frozen foods, for example, have to be kept as low as 10 degrees below zero, says Fruehauf Trailer company engineers.

Glass fiber insulation has been very helpful because it keeps the heat out. It is also light, durable, fire and vermin proof, able to withstand shock and vibration and has no tendency to settle, sag, pack or disintegrate.

Dead air space is also used. Diagram herewith, shows how a combination of F, fiber glass, A, dead air and S, styrofoam (vapor seal) is employed. R, designates refrigeration unit mounted on trailer.
