Diamond Loses Belt

Mangotich New Canadian Middlew't Wrest. Champ.

by Quintin Wight

Gori Ed Mangotich is the new Middleweight Wrestling Champion of Canada!

At the main bout of the evening in Richmond Hill Arena on Tuesday Gori Mangotich and Jack Diamond the titleholder, were the centre of attraction. For the first few minutes it was a nice clean bout. Diamond had Mangotich in a punishing headlock, and was squeezing for all his worth, when Gori flipped him over and started with a few tricks of his own. Then Diamond started. He punched Mangotich so often that he left a dent in his stomach, then whacked him a couple on the chin, spinning him round into the ropes. Mangotich came sailing off the ropes, smacking into that bear hug of Diamond's. And what happened then? Came the kneedrop. Gori doubled up in agony and lay writhing on the mat. He was then held and jabbed in the stomach until the referee, Johnny Logan, counted him out. So ended the first fall.

Mangotich was sizzling as they came out for the second. This time Diamond got dirty right off the bat. He punched and kicked at Gori until he so angered him, that just plain fury overcame Mangotich. He laid hold of Diamond and kicked him, then slugged him, and threw him all over the ring. Diamond took one look at what he had started, then headed for the wide open spaces. He might have been going yet if Gori hadn't snared him with a flying head scissors and brought him, over the top strand, back into the ring. Diamond now had his shoulders ground into the mat.

Then the match got rough. The third fall had a little of everything. Diamond put Gori down in a top spread and leg grapevine, then he wrapped his paws round his throat, and started strangling for dear life. Gori's face turned a beautiful shade of purple, fading into magenta around the edges. After a while it suddenly struck the referee, that this might be illegal, and after having thought it over some more, he decided to break the hold. He broke it — and Diamond put it back on. Then he broke it again — and Diamond put it back on. This might have gone on indefinitely if Mangotich hadn't slowly come round during
