Richmond Hill Women's Institute

The singing of the Institute Ode, repeating the Institute Creed, a short article on Remembrance Day read by the president, two verses of "Abide with me" followed by two minutes reverent silence in memory of the fallen and "The Queen", formed the opening ceremonies of Richmond Hill Women's Institute on Thursday, November 11. A donation was given to the Salvation Army. Mrs. W. Sayers and Mrs. L. W. Zuefelt were volunteer workers for the December Child Health Clinic. Mrs. W. Sayers and Mrs. G. Irwin were appointed W. I. representatives to the Branch of the Cancer Research Society being formed in the village. The Women's Institute also voted unanimously to support Mr. G. Mortson's application for a bus charter to provide transportation in the vicinity of Richmond Hill, feeling that it would fill a great need.

Mrs. B. L. Anderson, representing the Library Board spoke of the aid given by the Women's Institute to the Library and showed the members the Bronze Plaque which is to be placed in the library commemorating the large donation given by the W.I. This is to be unveiled later in the month. Miss Edna Izaard designed the Plaque and the consensus of opinion was that it was of a very fitting design, featuring as it does the Women's Institute crest.

Mrs. Hartree of Willowdale delighted those present with two solos. Mrs. Irwin, delegate to the Area Convention at the Royal York early in November reported that the tractor given to the village in Greece by Women's Institutes of Ontario had been used by 106 families. She reminded us that women are now eligible for jury duty and the letter J after anyone's name on the voters' list shows those who might be called.

Roll call was replied to by naming a famous Canadian woman and giving a donation of dried fruit for the link institute in Wales. Miss Ethel Chapman, guest speaker, was ably aided by the president, Mrs. H. H. MacKay, who had before her marriage been a fellow worker on the staff at the Women's Institute offices.

Miss Chapman's topic was Leadership. She said the word leadership frightens us a little since people are afraid of being led. It is a type of service we can give and it also brings something to ourselves. No one person can lead in everything. Our own gift of leadership is the talent in us and we should try to develop that talent so that we can be leaders in that field. We should also learn to be followers of those with other gifts.

To be leaders we must also prepare ourselves for leadership. We must go on developing, gain more knowledge and acquire more inspiration to give out. We must also learn to work with and through other people. Great leaders have visions and dreams. You have to believe in things before you can work for a cause. You must also have courage to work for a cause that means much to you.

Leadership grows sometimes out of the hard things coming into people's lives. The great work accomplished by Nellie McLung in the Canadian West is an example of this. There is a job one can do within our capacity and we can grow into leadership through enlarging our capacity. Don't stand around trying to develop that talent into greater usefulness.

A leader has to be an artist in working with people — not a manager since one cannot force people into doing things. But a good leader interests people so that they will go along. A leader who can spark other leaders and get them working and liking it is an outstanding person.

With young people everything is at the beginning and so there is a great chance for guidance there. Encourage young people to use their own gifts. Make them realize that anything they wish to accomplish they can.

Mrs. L. W. Zuefelt thanked Miss Chapman mentioning the new appearance of "Home and Country", the Women's Institute magazine of which Miss Chapman is Editor. For the usual social half-hour following the meeting, Mrs. C. Harding and Mrs. W. Anderson poured tea at a table suitably decorated with flags and poppies and Mrs. K. Blanchard, Mrs. B. Mundy, Mrs. C. Hanson and Mrs. A. Cruickshanks were hostesses.

Village Council Regular Session Norman Todd, chairman of the Richmond Hill Planning Board conferred with council Monday night relative to applications which have been made by a few property owners to sub-divide existing lots for residential construction. Council is on record as opposing any residential subdivision until there is some industrial development and the Planning Board asked an explanation of this policy as it related to certain cases which have arisen. Council made it clear there was no intention of working a hardship on anyone who had a large property and wished to subdivide one or two lots. Councillor Jack Rice complained that some builders were starting construction before building permits are obtained. He urged that a warning be given against this practice. Councillor Rice presented a motion asking that Mr. Stevenson recent purchaser of a property on North Yonge Street be warned that the issuing of a building permit did not necessarily give any right to contravene the land use by-law. He said there was a possibility the owner might be planning to use the building for other than an accessory building for which permit was issued. Councillor Middleton took strong objection to such a motion. "You and the Planning Board are just stirring up trouble" he said to councillor Rice, "we have no right to assume he's going to use the building improperly". Deputy Reeve Tomlin seconded the Rice motion but after a rather heated discussion in which councillors Rice and Middleton took part it failed to carry. Council accepted with thanks the deed of a portion of land from Norman Todd to enable the municipality to proceed with the opening of Pugsley Avenue in the easterly section of the village. War Memorial Councillor Perkins suggested council take action to speed up consideration of the memorial for those who died in World War II. Reeve Taylor said he expected a report from the committee would be presented to council in the near future. Dogs Councillor Perkins complained about dogs running at large. He said he complained with reason as a stray dog this week stole some venison from his back kitchen. He urged that the Humane Society be asked for a report. "I'm one who voted to give them a lot of money to look after the dogs this year, and I'm not very well pleased with the results. All Running At the conclusion of Monday's meeting Reeve Taylor and all members of council intimated they likely would be standing for re-election.
