Relax When Attacking The Net

The tendency among tennis players when attacking the net is to develop tension. This is noticeable in the way the neck and shoulders tighten up and the grip on the racquet becomes accentuated. A loose, relaxed position seems to aid skill at reacting quickly and making effective shots. Tension seems especially detrimental to hitting good overhead shots. Move in loose.

Streak Of Bad Luck

Athough he's had more trouble than Hitler in the last few weeks, Weston's Bill Cromb is still very much in the $1,000 Carling Race at Pinecrest Speedway.

The long-geared 25-year old speed-demon was going great guns at the No. 7 highway track until four weeks ago. He had won four features, came second in another and was coasting along in front of the point race when the bug-bears of all race drivers - accidents and car trouble - overtook him.

It all started when Garnet Clarkson's jalopy landed atop Cromb's No. 11 in a feature and smashed his radiator, hood and windshield. The very next meet, Wild Bill's buggy blew a connecting rod and wound up with a large hole in the side of his motor. That sidelined the redhead until has been done and the guy who hauls house trailers in his spare time, is back on the beam again. This suggests the rest of the field had better watch their Ps and Qs. "You gotta put a lot of money into a fast car to win," Cromb stated. "And if you're winning, you have to spend to stay winning.

But stock car racing is a good And Wild Bill has shown he's a pretty fair sort of a sport, too. He loves to win but has never been known to try to do so by other
