Drama Production

The late Rebecca de Winter's cousin, Jack Flavell, was played by Warwick Butt. Favell is a scheming ne'er-do-well who tries to turn any event to his own advantage. Finding that the young bride does not return but rather scorns his amorous advances, he returns after the inquest, when Rebecca's body was found, to extort money from de Winter. He, like Mrs. Danvers, regrets his actions and leaves when he learns Rebecca was in dread suffering.

William Ferguson took the solid, kindly role of Col. Julian and even though he was showered with facts and accusation from all sides, carried through the impression of complete calm and indifference to criticisms of the coroner's verdict of suicide. Gordon Lewis reappeared as Tabb, the boat builder, who gave evidence that the boat had not sunk from natural causes.

A typical English family re-creation, with a portrait of Joseph Rabinowitch. However when the de Winters decide not to heed Col Julian's suggestion to return to the continent and to make a new life for themselves at Manderley, Frith's impersonal countenance breaks into a broad happy smile as he learns that his master, whom he has served since boyhood, plans to return.

Although perhaps the main purpose of this Valentine party is that a "good time be held by all", the underlying aims of the Alumni are not to be overlooked. It is to be hoped that more and more former students will join the association, since it is the only in this way that ideas to provide such things as achievement cups, plaques in memory of students who lost their lives in the Service, scholarships and regular sports and social evenings for members, can materialize.

The Alumni is setting its sights high, but the present committee has every hope that these accomplishments and many more are well within the realms of probability for an active, interested Alumni Association.

150 Attend Annual Temperance Meet John Roxborough, Melville; Gail Aylett, Wesley Corners, and Betty Mae Fosbury, Queensville, were oratorical contest winners at the annual convention of the North York Unit of the Ontario Temperance Federation held at Wesley church, near Vanderloo, last Thursday. There were 150 people in attendance, 20 from Newmarket.

Speakers at the convention included Rev. Garnet Lynd, former Wesley minister, now of Port Credit, Rev. R. W. Whelan, Toronto, and at the evening session, Rev. M. J. Aiken of Newmarket. Other speakers were the president, Dr. J. P. Wilson and Royal Moulton, Toronto, Field Secretary for central Ontario. The nomination committee reported that Dr. J. P. Wilson, Rev. H. E. Wellwood, secretary treasurer and Mrs. E. M. Starr of the department for childhood and youth, had served the Federation for many years but were resigning their offices. Harry West, R. 3, Newmarket, agreed to act as president and Rev. J. O. Totton as secretary treasurer for the coming year. Other vacancies are to be filled.

sacred numbers will be Handel's "O Lovely Peace" sung to piano and quartet accompaniment. Other numbers will include Purcell's "Evening Hymn" composed on a ground bass, a group of songs with organ accompaniment and two groups of secular songs of a lighter nature.

The Quartet will contribute music from the quartets of Beethoven, Haydn and Borodin. Two members of the quartet will also provide solos. Mrs. Betty Byfield will play "On Wings of Song" by Mendelssohn. It is interesting to know that when Betty Byfield, formerly Betty Ann Fischer, was nine years old she was a guest soloist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under Sir Ernest MacMillan. Those who heard her last year will agree that she is a wonderful violinist and an outstanding musician. Joseph Rabinowitch, will play "Kol Nidrei" by Bruch. Both Betty Byfield and Joseph Rabinowitch will be accompanied by a well known and accomplished pianist, Beth Harwood. Tickets for the concert will be available at the main Church door and everyone is most cordially invited to attend.

Earl Haig Alumni Plan Gala Evening

Earl Haig's recently formed Alumni Association has planned another gala evening for members and their friends. The evening will be a bridge, euchre and dance to be held at the Collegiate on Saturday, February 12. Everyone is invited with the admission ($1.) being charged at the door. Alumni members will be admitted free on presentation of their membership card. The cafeteria is to remain open and, of course, prizes are to be one of the feature attractions.

The alumni's first social endeavour, a dance held at the school, was such a great success that the committee immediately began plans for another big event.

Although perhaps the main purpose of this Valentine party is that a "good time be held by all", the underlying aims of the Alumni are not to be overlooked. It is to be hoped that more and more former students will join the association, since it is the only in this way that ideas to provide such things as achievement cups, plaques in memory of students who lost their lives in the Service, scholarships and regular sports and social evenings for members, can materialize.
