by The Tatler If the family income were slashed could you, resident of a town comparable to ours, make a living or at least make enough to keep the wolf from the door? "I had to and I did," a woman who is or appears to be active every waking moment told the Tattler this week. "I had to make a living for myself and three little ones when my husband became incapacitated. In a most surprising way I soon got into a little business of my own. I was short of cash. In fact, I had none, and I looked over the house for something I could sell. "I picked on two pieces of our furniture and advertised them in the Liberal's classified page. I sold each of them next day, and the idea of making the classified column an almost regular medium for other things occurred to me. Now I buy used things and my judgment must be good because I always make sales at a little and sometimes a big profit. For weeks I have been averaging profits of $5 to $15 a week and I know my busi-

"I use only our home town paper, and for a long time past I have been getting repeat orders and inquiries for many things. It was just good luck perhaps that I hit on my little gold mine in the Liberal, but it surely stands to reason, too, that with so many new people moving into our town or district there must be a demand such as I have discovered.
