From all reports, the district had a reasonably safe Christmas as far as fires were concerned. There are no reports of fire calls for the local brigade on Christmas Day and the only other call received during the Christmas season was to Doncaster where a burning motor on an oil burner filled a house with smoke. There was little damage.

age that's not so well known. Some manufacturers stretch their cloth in order to achieve certain effects. Comes cleaning time and - zip - back it goes to its original (and smaller) shape. You have a protection against the garment that's not pre-shrunk in manufacture. Look at the label - manufacturers make sure you're told when they do preshrink, they overlook it when they skip this important process. There's little or no protection against the headaches caused by fabrics which have been stretched in manufacture. This is a real bugbear, but usually the trained and suspicious eye of a dry cleaner can spot the evidence.

Our best advice when you have this kind of fabric is: Don't get dirty!

With almost everything else you own, though, your dirty business is our business. A professional staff like ours can bring amazing sparkle back into clothes, but you'll never find us ruining clothes by trying to clean the special fabrics that shouldn't be cleaned.
