Stock Loss From Rabies Not Great

According to information just released, loss of livestock from rabies has not been as great as some reports would indicate. The confirmed cases of rabies continue to be predominantly in foxes. These constituted 68% of all cases in the last fiscal year, and the percentage is running the same so far this year. In the past fiscal year, ending March 31st, rabies in all of Canada claimed 101 cattle, 10 horses, 14 sheep, 4 swine and 1 goat. In the first quarter of this fiscal year, the disease was confirmed in 77 cattle, 3 horses, 20 sheep and 4 swine throughout the country.

The current outbreak of rabies in Ontario is the result of the natural spread of the disease in wildlife from the Northern Territories where it was prevalent a few years ago but where it has now virtually disappeared. According to W. M. Cockburn, Agricultural Representative for York County who has been discussing this matter with the Health of Animals in Toronto, the outbreak moved from the northern areas down through Simcoe County, caught the north end of York and has veered off to the west into Dufferin and Gray Counties.

Since the matter of animal contagious diseases is handled by the Federal Health of Animals Branch, suspected cases are referred to their district or regional offices by the local Veterinarians and specimens submitted to laboratory test. While there is a continuing danger of domestic animals contacting rabies from infected wildlife, the main threat both to domestic animals and to humans would be if rabies became established in dogs. The Department's major effort in dealing with rabies has been in conducting widespread dog vaccination clinics in the infected areas. These clinics are open to anyone and not limited to the municipality in which they are held. This programme has been successful so far in preventing rabies in dogs, thus reducing the hazard to humans. Fortunately in the current outbreak, there have been no cases of human infection.

Some groups or individual farmers have suggested vaccination of herds and flocks but this would appear to be too big an undertaking to be practical. Besides, in many cases, the peak incidence in an area would possibly be over before this could be done.

Henderson Home & School
Henderson Avenue Home and School Association held its first general meeting of the year at Henderson Avenue School Monday evening, September 8. Close to 100 parents, and the full teaching staff of 14 attended this opening session. A film on teaching problems was shown; this was afterwards discussed in small groups by the parents. Principal Allan Martindale introduced the staff to the parents. Mr. Martindale reported that enrollment at Henderson has this year reached a peak of 475 pupils, 88 of whom are in the new kindergarten. There are now 14 teachers at the school; Mr. Martindale contrasted this with the status when the school opened in 1953, when there were only five teachers at Henderson. However, he added, three out of the five originals are still at the school. Mr. Martindale asked that parents who had occasion to call to the school should do so between the hours of 9 to 9:30 on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. He explained that this was because he was not teaching a class during these periods, and would be better able to give his attention to any problem which might arise.

After the showing of the film, the teachers went to their own class rooms, where the parents who had children in those classes assembled to hear a description of the course of studies which would be followed during the coming year. Most parents found this the most interesting feature of the meeting; and the teachers are to be congratulated on preparing this material so soon after the beginning of the school year.

The executive committee of the Henderson Avenue Home and School Association held a brief meeting at the school at the close of the general meeting. It was decided to hold the proposed Fun Fair at Henderson Avenue School on Saturday afternoon, October 25, between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m. Committees are being organized to look after such activities as the fish pond, the tea room, the sale of hot dogs, a bake table and similar ventures. It is also hoped to have one of the classrooms set aside as a sort of nursery for the smaller children, with movies and perhaps a puppet show to keep them amused while their parents attend the fair.

The London Sunday Times prints the following conversation between a visiting American and an Eton schoolmaster:
"Do you allow your boys to smoke?" the American asked.
"I'm afraid not," said the Etonian.
"Can they drink?"
"Good gracious, no."
"What about dates?"
"Oh, that's quite all right," said the master, "as long as they don't eat too many."

A certain sea captain, who was known for his extreme frugality, once sent a small boy on an errand. When the boy returned, the captain made a great show of searching through his pockets.
"That's too bad, Jim," he said finally, "I thought I had a nickel here."
"Captain Henry," said the boy, "you look again. If you ever had a nickel, you've got it yet."
