Holy Trinity At Thornhill To Undergo Further Changes

By Doris M. Fitzgerald
What could be more startling to a congregation than the suggestion that their historic Church, the oldest in the village, be moved to a new and larger site? Such a suggestion was made to the vestry of Holy Trinity Church, Thornhill in 1947, as one way of solving the pressing problems of parking, expensive repairs to the building, and the need of greater seating space. By March 1951 the proposal had become an established fact, and members were once more worshipping in the old white clambord building. Only this time the familiar square tower, and front door, faced Yonge St. from a commanding site on Brook, at Jane St., which had been bought from Dr. Lorne Pierce. An additional twenty feet in length has provided more seating accommodation, and there was a roomy basement auditorium and parish hall. Gone were the sagging floors and cracking plaster walls, and worries about parking. Plans for the enlarged church and the parish hall were drawn by Mr. Sidney Kertland, architect member of the parish, and great grandson of Wm. Parsons, one of the founders of Trinity. He also supervised the work which was undertaken by the Albert Clarke Co. of Weston. Dismantling of the 120 year old building began in the early summer of 1950, following a brief and poignant service of "deconsecration." Each board and timber was numbered, and all deteriorating wood was discarded. When the momentous task had been successfully completed, the members of Holy Trinity believed that the church was equipped for another century of service.

That was seven years ago, and in the interim the continued growth of the village has resulted in a new set of problems, and another somewhat startling proposal. In short, the members of Trinity Church are being asked to give serious consideration to the very urgent need of extra accommodation for the Church school which now has an enrolment of 400 pupils, and can expect many more in the near future. Careful study has shown that 15 sq. ft. is the desirable minimum for one child. The Church school now has 2000 sq. ft. and needs at least 6,000 sq. ft. in order to provide proper teaching facilities and conditions. Other suggested requirements include a church office with facilities for secretarial work (the old vestry is little more than a passageway with three doors), rooms suitable for meetings of up to 50 people, additional wash, and cloak rooms, storage space for the different organizations, less cramped kitchen quarters, and a more spacious auditorium and hall for congregational meetings, bazaars and community affairs.

Recognizing the need for future expansion the lot to the south of the church was purchased a year ago, and a committee appointed to study the use of the land. Several special vestry meetings have been held, and on the recommendation of the Parish Council, the firm of Routhwaite and Fairchild was asked to study the suggested needs of the Parish, and to prepare tentative plans of a new building to supplement the present parish hall.

These were shown for discussion and criticism at the Trinity congregational dinner meeting held in the church hall of Thornhill United Church on Wednesday evening, October 29th. Today when the parish hall is crowded each Sunday morning with eager children, and hums each week day with the activities of 14 church organizations and various youth groups such as the Cubs, and Scouts, it is hard to realize that Holy Trinity existed for a century without a basement, or a hall.

"How did the church manage?" we asked Mrs. W. C. L. Ball, a life long member. "Well Sunday School was always held at 10 a.m. in the Church, and there were only two teachers. The W.A. was the only church organization and meetings were held in the homes of the members. For the special Christmas entertainment either the Masonic Hall or the old ballroom in Findlay's Hotel was rented. Then for many years a garden party was held on June 20 in the grounds of Mr. John Langstaff's home, and later, of his sons, Mr. Edwin, and Dr. Garry Langstaff, who operated it as the Hawthorne Mineral Springs (a health resort). "The property which once belonged to Benjamin Thorne is now owned by the Thornhill Golf Club.

Mrs. Ball believes that the idea of a parish hall, which would also serve the community, originated between 1913 and 1918, when the Rev. S. A. Lawrence was rector, and a Men's Club was started. There was no campaign however until 1928. Then the church driving sheds were torn down to make room for a substantial red brick hall, designed by Mr. Wm. Riddell, for some what over $10,000. (Water and plumbing were put in at a much later date). When completed in 1929 the hall was a credit to the church but also something of a luxury. It was not in great demand as a community hall because of the lack of parking, and the steep hill which tended to isolate it from the centre of the village. During the depression years the mortgage payments were a heavy burden to the small congregation, but the debt was finally cleared in 1943, largely due to the unceasing efforts of the Womens Club, formed for that purpose. Their strivings were not lost for without the $22,000 gained by sale of the hall to the Davey Tree Co. it would not have been possible to move Holy Trinity to a large site.

The hall was later resold by the Davey Tree Co. to the Thornhill Baptist Church which uses the de-consecrated ground of Trinity Church for parking.

Interesting Hobbies Of Folks Around Thornhill

(by Doris M. Fitzgerald)
Away back in 1943 we did a series of articles for "The Liberal" called "Hobbies, interesting things that people in our district are doing." There was much to write about for many expert needleworkers, quilters and rug hookers lived in the Thornhill area, and a sprinkling of artists, and other talented men and women had moved here from the city. All were thankful to have creative hobbies to turn to for a brief respite during the tense war years.
Two very successful fund raising Handicraft Fairs were held by the Thornhill Red Cross at the home of the Misses Boyle on Centre Street, and in 1946 the W.A. of Holy Trinity Church sponsored a third in their parish hall (now Thornhill Baptist Church), which featured demonstrations in silver-smithing, spinning, weaving, square knotting, leathercraft, whitening, flower arrangement, and linoleum block cutting and printing.

Since then many of the local craftsmen and artists have moved away, or died, and the village has grown to the point where one no longer knows all the neighbours, even by sight. When we learned that a handicraft and hobby show was being held in connection with the Thornhill Home and School Association meeting, we slipped in to have a look around. Had our presence been questioned we would have traded on a pre-war membership in Thornhill H & S, and a little granddaughter in this year's kindergarten. Though primarily curious to see what was being done, there came an urge to write a little about the clever people whose work was on view.
Mrs. C. B. Atkinson, who confessed that she had wanted to see something of the sort at the school for several years, was the very able convener of the affair. She was assisted in rounding up some of the hobbyists, and in arranging the exhibits, by H & S member, Mrs. P. Townsend Carter, who has the Artisans' Bazaar at the Farmers' Market. Originality and expert craftsmanship were everywhere in evidence, and the display proved an interesting and stimulating mixture of school children's hobby collections and the skills of post-war residents, and "oldtimers".
The spun linen plate mats and the blue wool coat, woven and tailored by Mrs. Owen Cassidy reminded us of the many, many beautiful things she has made on her loom during the past 20 years. Mrs. E. M. Blackburn, who had attractive scarves, mats, fibre bags, and a fibre rug in the show, learned to weave about 18 years ago, and has since given up her beauty parlor in order to devote all her time to this ancient art. She also gives lessons in weaving. Miss Janet Hall, whose grandfather was a weaver of Paisley shawls in Scotland, had brought her "inkle" loom, for making belts, to the exhibition, but she is also proficient on other types of looms. Miss Hall was a teacher of recreation for 10 years, at the John Ross Robertson School in Toronto.

Quilting comes naturally to Mrs. S. Whitmore because her mother was an expert. The little quilts which she designed and made for her grandchildren were very much liked, so she continues to make them as a pin-money hobby.
Indomitable little Mrs. Bertha since 1931, finds crocheting good exercise for her hands, and has made many handsome crocheted table covers similar to the two shown.
I am very grateful for the splendid Adult Education program in Canada," said Swedish born Mrs. Alla Bjorkman, who took a course in ceramics at the Central Technical School, Toronto, ten years ago, and she is showing some of her attractive pottery. "I like to make mixing bowls, vases and casseroles, things that are useful as well as decorative. Besides I think food tastes

Destitute Widow Voluntarily Assisted By Langstaff Friends

John Henry Bentley died October 21 at the age of 44 and left behind a wife Shirley, a son Roy, 13; a daughter Elda, 8; a son David, 2; a small home, and no source of income.
For 40 years, John Henry Bentley lived in Langstaff. Fifteen years ago he settled down with Shirley in their home on Yongeview Crescent.
Shortly after the marriage, he was stricken with tuberculosis. When he was released from the hospital, he had only a half of one lung left with which to breathe. Soon it was found he had an enlarged heart, then around October 14, he was confined to bed with a bad attack of asthma. It was just too much after all those years of suffering.

For the last year and a half, John Henry Bentley was a night watchman at the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests in Maple. This was the first time he was able to work through the winter in many years. Previously, he could only work during the good weather due to his physical limitations.
His illness prevented John Henry Bentley from getting any insurance, so he had to build a home a piece at a time, when he could afford it. The taxes on this home are still owing for the past three years. Services were held from Wright & Taylor's Funeral home in Richmond Hill.

family to take care of such a development. The children and his wife must eat, and with winter coming on, they must have fuel.
Where is it all going to come from . . . and who will pay for it?
Mrs. Bentley doesn't know where to turn next; the shock of losing her husband has been too much for her.
But her neighbours haven't forgotten her. In the few small blocks that make up the area, $109 has been collected from friends who would like to help. The Baptist church is conducting a separate campaign to provide at least the necessities of life through the winter, and civic officials are being approached by many people in her behalf.
In her time of grief, Shirley Bentley must surely feel she is now all alone in the world with her three children to raise. In a large city, such would be the case, but not in Langstaff. The residents there, though they may not have too much, are sharing a little of their benefits with a friend of many years standing, and things are looking brighter for John Henry Bentley's destitute widow day by day.

Mrs. Bentley gets the baby bonus for her three children, but that is not very much. She asked a friend to apply to Vancouver township for relief, but as yet has received no reply. She will be getting the mother's allowance, but that won't be for some time yet.
The breadwinner of the Bentley family is gone. He was unable to make provision for his groups that so magnificently answered the plea for help, and the association members' wholehearted support. Prize-winners were: Portable television set, Mrs. R. Dodds, Willowdale; Electric frying pan, Mrs. B. Wooley, Langstaff; Pop-up toaster, Hugh Crimble, Toronto; Coffee maker, Ruby Green, Port Whitby; Paint, Mr. McNab, Toronto; TV lamp, G. R. Townsend, Willowdale; Doll, M. L. Galbraith, Thornhill; Bicycle, Guy Markle, Chas. Howitt School, Thornhill.

Hula Hoop Contest: 2 silver dollars each winner.
7 years and under, Carolyn Locke; 8-13, Liem Wheeler, Elimination; 8-13, Shirley Davis; 13 and over, Bob Horn. Performance and style, Lynda Rapsin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length brocaded white satin gown designed on Princess lines with a Queen Anne collar; her Juliet style head dress was caught to a finger tip veil and she carried a white prayer book arranged with white orchids and stephanotis — her prayer book was the one carried by the bride's mother at her own wedding.

better when cooked in earthenware." Mrs. Bjorkman is a masseuse by profession.
R. E. Bowley, a research chemist at Falconbridge Nickel Mines Laboratory, was content with oil painting, woodworking and photography as spare time hobbies until three years ago, when he paid a week-end visit to his artist mother, and became interested in her newest venture, enamelling on copper. She assisted him in buying supplies, and gave him some pointers, and he has been happily engaged ever since making costume jewellery, little boxes, etc. Mr. Bowley prefers to experiment with his own ideas and designs, rather than use pre-cut copper or stock patterns.
The decorative wirework fish, the dagger (ground from a worn out file), and the musicians' silhouette, cut from display board, drew lots of favourable comment. According to their maker, Eric Winter, they demonstrate what can be done with "bits and pieces", and, also, that to be attractive and pleasing to the eye, an object need not be made of expensive material. Mr. Winter, cabinet designer by profession, is also blessed with deft fingers, and does not stick to any particular medium. He likes to create things as needed, such as the fish, which was made for a blank wall space.
Near his interesting aerial views of Thornhill, and some portraits of his neighbour's children, Bernard Mendoza had left a note to the effect that for the amateur photographer a sound knowledge of the technique of handling a camera, and of developing a film, was more important than an expensive camera. Mr. Mendoza, a licensed commercial pilot, first became greatly interested in photography when flying planes for photographic surveys, and he learned the value of pictures as records when participating in a sales promotion trip. He is now taking a course in photography with the intention of becoming a professional photographer.
Two other camera enthusiasts with photographs in the exhibition were W. R. Linton with an interesting study of a master mechanic in his machine shop, and Ken C. Smith with portraits of Mayor Phillips, movie stars Ann Baxter and Jerry Lewis, and Susan Brain, Thornhill. Mr. Linton, a Toronto stockbroker with Hevenor & Co., has been a photographer for 14 years, does a lot of colour work now, and is often called upon to take wedding pictures for friends.
Ken Smith says photography is a complete change from his work as assistant chief engineer of Radio station CKY. He took it up as a hobby three years ago, now finds that it is useful too, when important guests visit the studio he takes pictures for the records.

History repeated itself again, at the wedding reception held at St. Andrew's Golf Club for 100 guests, when the bride and groom cut the wedding cake with the knife the bride's mother and father had used at their wedding.
The mother of the bride received the wedding guests wearing a dress of brocaded satin in Dior blue with matching accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother who wore a gown of printed satin and a corsage of white gardenias.
Following a wedding trip to New York and Bermuda the happy pair are now living in their new home, built by the groom, on Clarke Ave.
