Trustees Present Report

oration hydro would be assumed within a reasonable time, requiring at least $80,000 debentures.

Mr. Rowland was satisfied the hydro would not permit the change unless the village could finance it.

In the meantime, it would be a debt upon the community, noted Mr. Vale. He asked if there had been any survey to indicate the number of schools to be added.

Development Unknown
Mr. Findlay said the school board regularly took a survey of pre-school children to anticipate school needs. "We don't know how fast the area will develop or if it will."

Mr. Vale: "You didn't obtain a report from the school boards on future school population or construction?"

Mr. Findlay: "They're more likely to come to us."

Mr. Vale referred to the trustees' filed report that village autonomy was partly due to cooperation with council "and everything functioned nicely."

Mr. Rowland interjected, "Except they didn't get enough money."

Mr. Vale pointed out, under incorporation "you withdraw from the borrowing power of the township."

Mr. Findlay: "We don't know of anything needed to borrow."

Asked about a municipal office, Mr. Findlay pointed out, "We already have it."

Mr. Vale suggested all capital expenditures had been donated by the police village and an incorporated area would lose the benefit of King Township's substantial assessment on large estate farms.

Mr. Rowland said he hoped for some industrial assessment in the new area. He suggested it would be more efficient to bring in the revised assessment in 1959 than a year later.

Mr. Vale said "It is not a naive assumption of the Police Village that reassessment will produce increased assessment?"

Mr. Findlay: "They are already aware of that."

Triple Assessment
Mr. Vale pointed out the village's present assessment could be tripled to $1,600,000 under the reassessment program, which would increase the community's borrowing power.

Mr. Findlay agreed that was so, "if you have to consider the borrowing power."

Mr. Vale questioned, "How can you administer better the existing Police Village if incorporated?"

Mr. Findlay: "There is nothing more to administer. We are thinking of a larger urban area."

Mr. Vale: "The whole crux is the future rather than present?"

Mr. Findlay: "No."

Mr. Vale: "Don't you think it is handing subdividers benefits on a platter?"

Mr. Findlay: "What benefits?"

Incorporation Policy
Asked by Mr. Lucas about the policy of incorporation, Mr. Findlay said a lot of people had contributed to that and the township had asked the village to incorporate. He said there had been no letter or resolution.

Upon the insistent questioning of Mr. Lucas to name one in authority who had asked the village, Mr. Findlay said Mr. Bruce Davis, chairman of the Planning Board had "asked when and a date." The township's official plan indicated it and over a period of years in casual conversation Township had asked when incorporation would take place, "but not in the last 12 months," said Mr. Findlay.

He referred to a joint study group by King City organizations considering a larger area. "More recently the bridge caused it to drop back."

Area Of Influence
Mr. Lucas: "What is the reason this particular area is sought?"

Mr. Findlay: "This is zoned as somewhat an area of influence."

Asked about the system of zoning, Mr. Findlay said the trustees had requested it, then worked closely with people outside the village who were in accordance with the trustees' views.

Mr. Lucas pressed for the "basic" reason for this area being chosen.

Mr. Findlay said "We felt we should go out to take in the zoned area." He agreed about extending it to the next sideroad north, "except for the bridge."

Regarding outside subdivisions, Mr. Findlay said they were referred to the village trustees only for water consideration, while trustees were fully consulted about subdivisions within the village.

Answering Mr. Lucas, Mr. Findlay said he had substantially prepared the trustees' report to O.M.B.

Mr. Lucas said, "Isn't it your own fault you're not getting fines?"

Mr. Findlay said he had understood the village couldn't employ a policeman, Mr. Lucas said the Police Act authorized a village to employ a policeman. "Then you could collect fines or make an agreement with Council."

Unconvinced an incorporated village would save on policing, crossing guard and existing expenses, Mr. Lucas conceded, "All right, you might save $60 on sheep and dog claims."

Mr. Lucas asked if the trustees had discussed with the school boards the changing of school sections.

Mr. Findlay replied S.S. 22 Board said it would make them very happy. "We have not officially ever gone to S.S. 2 Board but they know it's in the air."

Asked Over Services
Mr. Findlay said the trustees had never proposed the new structure to township council. "The gross amount might be increased, but services might be included." He indicated services might be taken over and provided with subdividers' money.

Mr. Lucas: "How would you get the money? When building permits are issued?"

Mr. Findlay: "Presumably,"

AURORA
The planning board has deferred decision on the two proposals for a shopping centre to be built on a site near "Subway Hill". The chief objections on the part of planning board members were that the new Regency Acres project was a traffic hazard, and that it was isolated.
