HAVE YOU HEARD THIS ONE?

Now that the weather's warming up, things will be a little easier on the morale of all women who had their hearts set on fur coats this past winter but found they had to "make do" with a cloth coat for at least one more season.

And, for that matter, even those who own fur coats will be putting them away for another season (in safe storage, I hope) and joining the ranks of those acquiring the season's new array of white wool coats.

These are something new and special in fashions this year, with the front of the shoulders or each side of the coat opening adorned with designs of semi-precious stones, pearls, rhinestones, satin bugle beads, sequins, radium beads and many others.

But let's face it: These coats are definitely a luxury item, for they demand a tremendous amount of skill and care in cleaning.

The white wool itself, of course, is especially tricky to clean, and with the be-jeweled designs, we are finding that additional special care is necessary.

If you decide to treat yourself to a white wool coat, I suggest you also pick up a garment bag for storing it between wearings. And be sure to send the coat in to us for special handling at the first signs of soiling.

This is a case where the old rule applies even more than usual: Get it cleaned often and get it cleaned expertly by having it cleaned at our plant.

Open New Travel Service

Mr. Herbert Goodhoofd, proprietor of the Globe Travel Service located on Yonge Street North in Richmond Hill is shown above with the members of his family. His charming wife is seen with their two sons, Herbert Jr. (left) and Anthony.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Goodhoofd who recently established Richmond Hill's first travel agency on Yonge Street, were born and educated in The Netherlands. Mr. Goodhoofd worked for ten years until 1942 as Inspector of Social Services for the City of Rotterdam in Holland.

Underground Activities

During the German occupation from 1943 to 1945 he worked with the underground movement. After the liberation he was hospitalized for six months.

After his marriage Mr. Goodhoofd with his wife emigrated to Canada in 1947 and has two children, Herbert, aged 12, and Anthony, aged 9, both born in Canada.

Various Jobs
Demonstrating his adaptability, Mr. Goodhoofd had to accept a variety of work opportunities following arrival in this country. First he worked for a year on a farm. Then followed three years in a factory, then a year as caretaker of a church. Finally in 1954 he got his start in a travel agency, which last experience slowly developed into a full time occupation for both himself and his wife.

From Newmarket

The fact that Mrs. Goodhoofd had many years of business experience and that Mr. Goodhoofd himself had travelled in many countries in Europe during his earlier years have proven a great advantage to them in first establishing and then developing their travel service. They set up and operated in Newmarket for three years until the recent move to Richmond Hill.

Supplying Long Felt Need
The town has long felt the need for a good travel agency locally and this is now provided by The Globe Travel Service operated from Yonge Street by this couple. They have taken up residence on Benson Avenue in the town.

Canada — Good Country
Of Canada they say, "This is a good country in which to live, it is still the land of opportunity for everyone who has a goal, some will power and common sense. Above everything else, the rewards are great for anyone willing to make initial sacrifices and to work hard."

Picture Contest Winners Announced Meeting April 28

The Richmond Hill Horticultural Society will show the colour slides entered in the Annual Competition and announce the winners at their meeting on Thursday, April 28, in the Lions Hall. This is the meeting which was originally scheduled for February 25, but was cancelled on account of bad weather.

Mrs. H. R. MacGregor, member of the Toronto Camera Club and well-known for her nature study and wild-flower pictures will be the judge. This should be a good opportunity to see some outstanding pictures, hear some expert criticism and improve your own techniques.

Deer In Toronto Area

Driven south by deep snow and extreme cold, deer are more plentiful in the Toronto metropolitan area than they have been for many years, Lands and Forests officers report. Motorists east of Toronto report narrowly missing deer on township back roads.

AURORA — Ted Ellison who drives the separate school bus from Schomberg to the fifth concession of King reports that this is the first spring in his eleven years as a bus driver that he has been unable to travel the route on the gravel roads. About 18 miles of the gravel roads on the bus route are so soft for safe driving.

Not Considering Jail Farm Site

York University is considering 12 possible sites but the Langstaff Jail Farm isn't one of them, Dr. Murray Ross, president of the university, said this week.

"We have had 12 properties offered to us and we have been looking at them all very carefully," he said in an interview. "In view of the price of the jail farm property and the fact we would have had to bid for it now, we said 'Count us out.' We can't make the decision that quickly." Toronto Board of Control has agreed to freeze negotiations for the Jail Farm until September 1 to allow the university a chance to raise money to bid on the property.

The city is asking $4,000,000 for the 712-acre farm, located near Yonge st. north of No. 7 Highway.

Maple Syrup Time

The manufacture of maple syrup from the sap of maple trees is one of the oldest farm enterprises in the country. The sap is again running in the Lake Simcoe District and a number of local farmers are busy tapping trees and making syrup.

One of the largest local producers is Mr. Amos Baker, R.R. No. 2, Maple, who has a 75 acre sugar maple bush which has been tapped regularly by 3 generations in the family. Usually, according to Mr. Baker, he and his son, Paul, with 2 assistants run the operation although from time to time some extra help is employed for the tapping of trees and collection of sap.

Most of the tapping takes place near the sap house located on the western edge of the bush in order to reduce the hauling distance. This year in order to tap trees further away not used previously, Mr. Baker installed a "MAPLEFLO" sap gathering system which involves connecting trees by small diameter plastic tubing. Usually 2 plastic spouts are connected to the tubing which runs from tree to tree and terminates in a large underground concrete tank. The tank is located in the lowest part of the property so that flow is by gravity. Sap is pumped from the tank to another tank on a wagon and then taken to the sap house.

At the present time the Bakers are tapping a thousand trees with the Mapleflo system and another 2000 trees with the one pail method. The operators use a gasoline driven auger to drill spile holes and by this technique can drill up to 250 holes per hour. Tapping started on March 28th and so far according to Assistant Zone Forester Mike Millar, who recently visited the operation, flow to date has not been at its best because of unfavourable weather. Best runs of sap occur during sudden and rapid thawing with temperatures between 40 F in the daytime and freezing at night. It has been found that the duration of the sap flow in any year depends on the weather conditions. Flow may be constant for some time out more often is broken into several distinct runs.

In the sap house the sap runs from a storage tank into the evaporator which is heated by a combination of wood cut from Mr. Baker's bush and oil squirted on top of the burning fuel. When the desired temperature has been reached and the water evaporated off, the maple syrup is drained out into large milk cans, kept for this purpose. The cans are then taken to another building and the syrup emptied into another holding tank preparatory to bottling.

If 1960 turns out to be a good year Amos Baker hopes to produce about 1000 gals. of syrup. This involves collection of a considerable quantity of sap since it is estimated that some 40 gals. of sap are required to produce 1 gal. of the finished product. This figure varies according to the sugar concentration in the sap and Mr. Baker expressed the opinion that this varies with the amount of sun shine during the previous June and its effect on

Pileated Moving South

The pileated woodpecker, one of the most spectacular birds in Ontario woodlands, is believed to be moving south. One has been sighted near the provincial tree seed plant near Barrie as well as in the vicinity of Pickering, only 25 miles east of Toronto. As large as a crow and with a conspicuous red crest, it is one of the few woodpeckers with a crest. It has distinctive black and white markings, but is mainly distinguished for its size, around 17 to 19 inches. Not too plentiful in northern habitat, it has seldom been seen in southern Ontario until recent years.
