I was delighted to hear that Mrs. Jenkinson was able to attend. It has been many months since she first took the stroke which has kept her bedridden, now with the help of a brace she is able to get about a little. After more than a week having passed since it happened I finally heard of the unfortunate accident that befell Mrs. Meuser. It seems she suffered a fall on the steps of the subway and after proceding to her destination discovered she had hurt her leg. After a trip to Branson Hospital and some X-rays it was revealed she had cracked a small bone just below the knee and so she emerged from the hospital with her leg encased in a cast from the hip to the toes. I understand it will be several weeks before this can be removed. We all hope the time will pass quickly and that once again we will see her smiling face as she gets out and a-putting on the porch lights. In closing this week I cannot help wondering why so many people are bored in a world full of so many thrillingly interesting
