Character In Handwriting
First Lady Of Vaughan Is Qualified For Duties

(BY ALEX SJOBERG (CGA - IGAS))
This week's specimen is an interesting one. To the analyst, it reveals energy, pride and dignity, a positive approach to matters and determination. We thought we would do a bit of evaluating in this column because many readers find evaluation a rather fascinating game, as indeed it is.
When we consider the forward slant of this writing before us we know there is a liking for people shown. Considering the upper loop letters, we must surmise there is a definite spiritual or philosophic outlook. Now then when we consider the retraced Ds and Ts we know that the writer possesses pride and dig-doubt. All things considered, these traits also mean that she would not seek to impose her personal views on another.
When we study the Ms and Ns, with their sharp points, we know that the writer likes to know what makes things tick. There is mental energy coupled with curiosity, the desire to explore or look into matters.
This is the writing of Mrs. Ruth McConkey, Vaughan Township Councillor, the "First Lady of Vaughan."
From a reporter's point of view, Mrs. McConkey in her actions, bears out the positive traits revealed by her writing. She is friendly, always ready to help, and will go to considerable trouble to provide newsmen with information. At the same time, she can show discretion.
Her writing shows that she has many irons in the fire, but that she does not confuse matters. We know this because while the lower loop letters are long, they do not become entangled with the line of writing below.
So, to you ladies (and men) who write like Mrs. McConkey it may very well be that you too are suited for public affairs.
(A grapho analysis report of your character is available through the G.A. Department, "The Liberal", for the nominal fee of $2. Submit one page of handwriting, and allow about one week for the analysis to reach you.)

Post $200 Bond Threatens Daughter Must Keep The Peace For Year

Magistrate O. S. Hollinrake in Newmarket Court Monday told Francis Agnew, 42, of Mount Albert, charged with threatening his daughter with bodily harm: "I don't think you're a bad fellow. You're apparently a good provider and a considerate husband and father when sober. When you get drinking you become quarrelsome. I am ordering you to post a $200 bond to keep the peace for one year."
Agnew, whose wife said he acted in a threatening manner against their 13-year-old daughter and that it was habitual of him to pick on her, his wife, whenever he drank, insisted that the woman and daughter had it all wrong. "My wife is a sick woman," he said. "The slightest thing upsets her. Why, on the night in question, she came home from a neighbour's saying she had decided to cut short her visit there because she feared she was going crazy. My daughter refused to obey me and I probably made a motion toward her. I've never struck any of my children."
Said the cad: "You've been married 18 years. There are eight children. Your wife isn't well. This is the time for you to show some consideration. After this, you behave yourself. I'll not deal so leniently with you another time."

Gets Ten Days
Twenty-nine-year old Douglas Burkholder of Stouffville, will spend ten days in jail for driving while impaired on April 6. Asked whether he had anything to say before he was sentenced he said: "I've been intending to join Alcoholics Anonymous." Police said they found him slumped over the wheel of his car after he brought the weaving vehicle to a halt in the centre of a road near Markham Village, at 1.20 a.m. Burkholder pleaded guilty.
Expensive Brazer
Lance McKay of Markham Township, who pleaded guilty to having liquor in a place other than his residence, said that on April 12, when arrested downing a bottle of beer beside his car a mile south of No. 7 on the Third Concession, that he had been hunting for a job, got thirsty and decided to abate that thirst. The drink cost him $10 and costs.

Impaired
Clarence Ross, 50, of Queensville, charged by Markham Township Police with impaired driving, was in no doubt about his fall from grace. Police said they found him slumped over the wheel of his car at 9 p.m. on the centre portion of a road and that it appeared he had intended to sleep off his jag. Magistrate Hollinrake took the view that inasmuch as the truck driver, by losing his driving privileges, would be severely penalized, said that he would impose the minimum fine, $50 and costs. The crown chipped in and said it would allow a three dollar reduction in witness fees. Accused was told to pay $30 on the spot and another $23 by May 8.
Limit Intake
Peter Kerr, 26, of Richvale, who pleaded not guilty to a drunk charge laid April 23 by Richmond Hill Police, was given the benefit of the doubt and received a suspended sentence. Police said he and a friend were picked up at a phone booth at 3.45 a.m. at Yonge and Dufferin streets, across from the police station. Said Kerr: "I told the officer I had consumed only four bottles of beer and that the rest of the case was at my home, but that didn't stop him from hauling me in. When the arrest took place, a friend and I were on the way to my home to pick up a fishing net and I was phoning for a taxi." He added that he had now changed his mind about going fishing.
His friend, Reginald Baker, 26, Thornhill, did not fare so well. Police said he was the owner of a car they had checked out just prior to the arrest, after it had run into a tree. "But I had only four bottles of beer, also," accused said. "That must be powerful brew!" said the magistrate, fining him $10 and costs and coupling the fine with some advice. "After this you had better look upon your limit as two bottles, not four," he said.
