IT'S A GAM-BOL—High-spirited Maurice Chevalier challenges actress Angie Dickinson to defend her claim to being the girl with the most glamorous legs in show business. She doesn't seem worried about outcome as they "ham it up" on Rome's Via Veneto.

AUDITION OR AUDACITY—The orangutan from London zoo could be putting on an act for U Sein Lwin Lay, who produces programs for British radio in Far East.

FURLOUGHED ROWBOATS—A ghost fleet of idle rowboats indicates how slow the pleasure-boat business is these days in Mergellina Harbor, in Naples, Italy.

TRIP FOR TOURISTS

STARTLING SEIZURE of the luxury liner Santa Maria fixed world attention on Portugal. Here are some scenes from Lisbon, the charming capital and heart of the shrunken empire of Portugal. It is a bustling modern city whose Moorish past shows in some of its older parts. It is one of the world's great ports. Pleasure-seekers from the U.S. and other countries flock to Lisbon, especially during the healthy mild winter. They see little of the Portuguese, whose plight was exposed by the Santa Maria incident.

Santa Gusta elevator is a well-known landmark.

Policeman in Lisbon's traffic.

The 357-foot high statue of "Christ the King" in harbor.

Shanties provide a contrast to these modern apartment buildings.

Overhead view shows Lisbon's waterfront—one of finest in the world.

NEVER HERD OF SUCH A CHAIR—This chair in home of George Kramper of St. Libory, Ill., has cowhide seat and twenty pairs of horns from herds in the area.
