The Globe of Friday points out that there are over 100 places in Toronto where men can engage in the discreditable practice of getting drunk, but not a single place in which they may go to get sober.

Here is one good sample of what man at Cedar Hall, Quebec, in the Gaspé peninsula accomplished by carefully watching his fairly good cows and feeding them better. His eight cows gave him an average of 5,176 pounds of milk each. The feed cost $4.12 more per cow than the previous year when he started his experiment in better feeding, but the total profit was $177.29 or an average of $22.16 per cow, double the previous year's total profit.

The death of Sheriff Daville, (County of York) makes vacant one of the most lucrative offices in the gift of the Ontario Government. The position is worth nearly $3000 a year. Alex Mc-Cowan, M.P.P. for East York, will make a strong bid for the position himself and he should stand the best chance, although there are now about 100 applicants for the position.

The nature of the swinging of arms while walking dates back to those unknown days when man was quadruped . . . and even today thousands of generations after he assumed the upright position . . . every time he takes a step his arm moves a trifle, involuntarily, as though desirous of taking a step in its turn just as it did when a man, then four-footed, pranced up and down the earth.

A large amount of electric power is now being used in Richmond Hill. Mr. Stirling has installed a 10 horse power motor in Trench's Carriage Works. Mr.
Lawrence now waters his plants and flowers in his greenhouse by a 5 horse power electric pumping outfit.

If you should be bitten by a dog suspected of rabies, don't get scared but act promptly. Im-

LURE OF THE NORTHLAND

This is a fish story. It is about neophyte me, who described it was time to learn what it is that annually draws thousands of men, and some women, to the backwoods of Canada. I felt I had been regaled long enough by tales of fishing camps in the bush and of the "big one that got away". When I learned there was such a camp run by a woman, I made my overnight reservations on the train and felt lucky in being able to book a three-day stay at Chenier's Camp, Felix, Ontario.

Until this moment of decision, I had never caught a fish, been out in a row boat for hours in pouring rain, put a worm or minnow on a hook or eaten three hearty meals a day - commencing with breakfast at daybreak.

When I boarded the Continental sleeper in Toronto, I discovered I was the only woman in a pullman carload of story-telling celebrating citizens from south of the border. They gave me a suspicious look as though I might intrude on their fun. I must confess I had to admire their noisy endurance, which they sustained most of the night, and their continued exuberance the following morning. If these were dedicated anglers, then I had begun to discover the plety great open spaces inspire.

Camaraderie is the leveler of all distinctions. Fish lore makes all folk friends. When my companions learned I didn't know a spinner from a wabblers, a whitefish from a weedler, or a casting reel from a trolling one, they made it their business to inform me. Before my flag station came into view I had been confidingly told which lure to use for a speckled trout, the one that was best for pike and a sure fire bet to catch a bass, I became "Sport" to this happy gang of well wishers when I disembarked and the train carried them on to their destinations.

I was a bit dismayed when I discovered I was the lone guest in a cabin furnished with eight beds, two coal oil lamps, a pump that gushed water when you knew how to prime it but with all other plumbing on the outside. My city slicker heart hit my boot tops. It was only the memory of the warm welcome Mary and Pete Chenier had given me on arrival, that kept me from plotting to hitch-hike aboard the next freight train that stopped to load or unload an angler's truck.

Married to a CNR section foreman, Mary Chenier runs the camp aided by her 80-year-old mother, Jimmy, the hired man, and the weekend help of husband, Pete.
Over the years Mary has survived the devastation of forest fires, the depression - when she walked seven miles to and from work each day for a dollar of pay - the menace of black fly plagues, seasonal drought or years when rain threatened ruination of her tourist business. She recalls that she left school when only nine years old to act as "cookee" for her mother, who catered to the ravishing appetites of lumberjacks.

The Right Combination This accounts for her intuitive hospitality. She knows that good beds, good food, shore lunches and transportation to and from lakes for her guests and their gear, constitutes success in the highly competitive fishing camp field.

In almost any direction from Felix there are rough lumber tote roads leading into nine well-stocked lakes.
These have been planted with speckled trout, rainbows, bass and pike; of course, not all varieties in every lake.
Even fish have a preference for their neighbours. Pickerel and speckles are arch enemies, I learned. Pete, who is always dreaming up new ways for Mary to invest her annual profit back in the camp, plans two-way radios to enable guests to communicate with the cookhouse if they want to be transferred to another lake.

I felt my emotional thermostat had adjusted to this rugged atmosphere when Pete suggested I get into my fishing gear so we could "get going". He didn't bat an eye when he saw my fancy slacks, pointed toe flat shoes, or the chiffon scarf that covered my beauty parlor hair-do. He soberly advised me to bring along a rain coat as he packed a moss-filled, worm-laden six-quart basket, two fishing rods, and a thermos of coffee in the bottom of an aluminum boat aboard a truck parked nearby.

When we arrived at Beulah Lake, Pete's instruction was easy to follow. In a matter of minutes I learned how to hold my rod, let out my line and detect a strike.
I had only one fault that almost broke his heart. I could not snag the critters. It's an art to set a hook.

I realized there is more truth than fiction in the tale of the "big ones" that lurk for the catching in these northland inland waters. Twice within minutes my rod bent with a weight my inexperience prevented me from successfully reeling in. I slackened the line and "the big one got away". Pete could have cried, I am sure, but he good naturedly promised "better luck next time".

Now I Know
This tale could have had a frustrating ending, but for the persistence of Mary and Pete Chenier. They were determined I would land a fish before the weekend was over. When I was content to let my hot roast beef and homemade raspberry pie dinner digest between warm blankets in my cabin, Pete hustled me off to Shoo Fly Lake. Four hours later I caught my first fish. It wasn't really that slippery beauty that was hooked, it was me.

I have reservations made at Chenier's Camp for next year. Lying around in conspicuous places is a list of fishing equipment I would be happy to receive as Christmas gifts. There is a leaf turned down in a mail order catalogue. Marked with ink are rubber boots, rubber pants to put on over my slacks when it rains, a parka and a jaunty peaked cap.

I know now why men ship boats and gear express, travel hundreds of miles by train from their home town base to the northern woods; sit for hours in fair weather and foul on the backless seats of outboard motor-driven boats dangling their lines overboard. They are lured by the anticipation of catching fish they'll probably never even eat. It's a fever that can only be assuaged by yearly participation in the sport.

Though half the fun is in roughing it, assurance of a happy and successful fishing trip is in comfortable train transportation and the accommodation of a well-run camp. The CNR and Mary Chenier know the secret of success. They should - they've been catering to the whims and appetites of sportsmen for years.

"Good Cheer" For Newspaperman

Four Canadian weekly newspaper editors from Nova Scotia are shown here issuing a call to their confreres across the nation to attend this year's annual meeting of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association in Halifax from August 14 to 16. Why the costumes? The theme of this year's CWNA Convention will be the "Order of Good Cheer". The Order, one of the oldest social organizations on the North American continent, was founded in 1606 at Port Royal, N.S., by Sieur Samuel de Champlain.
Editors and their wives attending this year's CWNA Convention will be inducted into the Order at a special ceremony at Province House in Halifax. Costumes of Champlain's era, worn by the quartet above, will be very much in evidence at the convention. From left to right: George Murray, of the Pictou (N.S.) Advocate; Fred W. Beattie, of the Annapolis Royal Spectator; Ralph Morton, of the Dartmouth Free Press and president of the Nova Scotia Weekly Newspapers Association; and Frank Burns, of the Kentville Advertiser and this year's convention chairman.

HEAR YE! HEAR YE!

Our troop-site is locally located in Sub-Camp Carrier at the corners of Main and Columbia Streets in the campsite. The troop is putting on a display of Olyn-pic style wrestling for the camp.
We all enjoy the Jamboree very much - the main activity begins with the swapping of badges and crests with boys from other provinces and with those from the States.
The troop is standing up and showing very well, giving those back home something to be proud of.

with a few representatives from the 1st Maple, 1st Kettleby, 1st King, 1st Bradford, 4th Aurora, 1st Newmarket, and 2nd N. Gwill-imbury troops. We are under the capable leadership of S.M. Norman Foster, A.S.M.'s Graeme Gould and David Rice and T. L.
Noel Gillings.

Our troop-site is locally located
in Sub-Camp Carrier at the
corners of Main and Columbia
is putting on a display of Olyn-
pic style wrestling for the camp.
and with those from the States.
of.

Lawn Bowlers Take Lead For Provincial Honours

Richmond Hill lawn bowlers made almost a clean sweep of honors in the district play-off in competition for provincial honours, at Stouffville, Tuesday night. The winners go on to play off with the northern section at Allandale next Tuesday. Future play for provincial championships will be at Belleville and Hamilton.
Rinks competition winners:
Hugh Verex, Alex Clark, Al White, Wilson Beresford, skip; colts, trebles, Erle Scott, N. Hamman, Sandy Macanuel, skip; singles competition winner: James Grainger.
