Richmond Hill Horticultural Society
 By Jane Williams

The Richmond Hill Horticultural Society held its annual Delphinium Show last Thursday night at the Lions Hall. Dr. H. H. MacKay presided over and opened the meeting and Mrs. E. Redelmeier convoked the flower show and supplied other outstanding features - the garden clinic and the flower arranging demonstration.
 Dr. MacKay introduced Mrs. H. H. MacKay, who kept the meeting enthralled with her clever ten-minute flower arrangement of a centerpiece used for a bridal supper. Novel to many was the use of a candleboard - an odd number of candles used in pink to carry out the lovely soft predominant colour of the pink tablecloth. Pink and white peonies, a few sprigs of baby's breath, complemented with blue cornflower, created a lovely professional type of decor. This feature of flower arranging was received so enthusiastically by the members and guests that it will probably be a permanent thing.

Taylor), Marjorie (Mrs. Paul Jolicoeur), and their three sons, Harvey, Howard, and Lloyd, along with their families, including eleven children.
Ross Doan Graduation Banquet
 Ross Doan school held its fifth annual graduation banquet at the school. The Grade 8 class had tastefully decorated their room and the tables were lovely with their white cloths and bowls of roses and peonies.
 Mrs. E. Lambert welcomed everyone and introduced the 26 graduates and their guests.
 Mrs. George Lawson and her helpers were responsible for the full course dinner, served by six grade 7 girls. Following dinner, Mrs. D. Robinson brought greetings from the school board and congratulations to the graduating class.
 Parents of the grads joined the group to enjoy the presentations. The valedictory address was ably given by Guy Wainwright.
 A former principal of Ross Doan school, Mr. Ralph Brown, was guest speaker for the evening. His talk featured encouragement for each of the grads to further his or her education, even though he might never be able to achieve high standing. Mr. Brown's quiet humour added much to his message.
 Vice-president Mrs. R. Gray presented the Home & School Scholarship for highest academic standing to Ian Rankin. Mr. R. Masters presented the Home & School scholarship for general proficiency to Inge Strauch. Dr. Ross Doan, with the aid of Mrs. Pressley, presented graduation pins to each boy and girl.
 Gifts from Home and School were presented to three teachers who are leaving, Miss C. Noble, Mrs. Irene Tait and Mrs. Marjorie Davies.

 A happy note brought the evening to a close, when songs, composed by Miss I. Harris, were sung. The graduation cake was cut and soon disappeared. Mr. Lou Wainwright spent a busy evening recording the event on film.

The rain held off, making the evening spent outdoors very enjoyable. A going-away gift was presented to Mrs. M. Clement, who left for a month's holiday with her family in Scotland. Mrs. R. Cartier accepted a gift on behalf of her new daughter, Jennifer Lee.

Kennel Problems Said Increasing In Markham Twp.

Complaints about the operation of a kennel on No. 7 Highway were voiced at Monday's meeting of Markham township council by Doug Richardson of Sussex Avenue and No. 7 Highway, spokesman for a group from that area. Runs were maintained, he said, within 100 feet of other houses and the howling of dogs started at 5 a.m. Part of the trouble, he asserted, was due to the fact that the proprietors of the kennel were boarding animals, which were complaining about being separated from their owners.
 A business was being conducted in a residential area, claimed Mr. Richardson. When it was said that the people complained about had been conducting the premises for a long time he denied it. "They have only been there about a year and are importing dogs from Germany," he declared.
Get Tough, Advises Deputy
 "It's time we showed these people we mean business," said Deputy-reeve Lawson Mumberson. A summons should be issued every day there was a complaint, he said, and this policy should be continuous. Mr. Richardson and his neighbours were advised to contact police if disturbances continued during the night, so that action could be taken.
 Dogs were featured on another occasion during the meeting, with council refusing to issue a kennel licence to an applicant who planned to live in Victoria Square and keep Chihuahuas. The breed, it was said, was barkless, but Deputy-reeve Lawson Mumberson questioned whether this might not be the thin end of the wedge, with Great Danes being the outcome.
 Councillors finally decided to consult other municipalities as to what their policies were before taking further action. Reeve Wilfred Dean thought that other areas were taking action which was driving kennels out and Markham was inheriting them.
