STOUFVILLE: William "Billy" Linton is dead, and the Tribune says his passing writes a concluding chapter in a true story more strange and remarkable than any volume of fiction. He was known as a hermit. The story book tale of Billy Linton will become a legend in Whitchurch Township. He lived alone, he died alone, and he was buried alone. No longer will Billy Linton hobble over the hillside of his sand-swept acres. His goat herds will become a thing of the past and even his cabin home will bow to the passing of time. The stories surrounding this fabulous figure will never die. The death of Billy Linton marks the passing of a legendary era in the history of the township where he lived and died alone.
