Story Of Congo Tells Of World Activities

Red Cross Unit For Hill And District Formed

Richmond Hill's third Red Cross branch was given an official send-off at a meeting in the town's council chamber last week. After effective service during two wars the unit stopped functioning in 1947. It will be revived as the Richmond Hill and District Branch and Ed. Butlin of Thornhill, spark-plug in community activities and a long-time resident of Richmond Hill before moving to Thornhill, will be its president.

Miss Margaret Gordon of the 1914-1918 war was vice-president, with Miss Ruth Johnson becoming secretary and Mr. W. Hamilton of Richvale being named treasurer. As a tribute to their work in the past, Mrs. P. C. Hill and Dr. Lillian Langstaff were named honorary presidents.

It was pointed out that, due to the formation of a strong auxiliary for the projected hospital for Richmond Hill, a certain amount of difficulty in obtaining membership might be experienced. But, as the Red Cross branch would supplement hospital activities in certain ways, such as enhancing interest in the supply of blood, it was decided to go ahead. Interest was shown in one of the Red Cross activities—its water safety service—and as there were a number of fields of public service not covered by existing organizations, it was decided that there was a vital need for a Red Cross branch in rapidly-growing Richmond Hill and district.

History Detailed History of two previous branches in Richmond Hill was detailed by Mrs. P. C. Hill, who said that in addition to the well-known unit which operated during the second world war an active one had existed in the 1914-1918 war also. Mrs. Hill, a Red Cross life member, spoke of the volume of money and supplies contributed by Richmond Hill citizens through the unit, and said that in the 1939-1945 war the activities of the branch had attracted widespread attention. Among other work, said Mrs. Hill, women of the Hill had made and sent nearly 4,000 pounds of jam to beleaguered Britain. "I hope the 17,000 people here now will support the Red Cross as well as our 1,300 population did in 1939," said Mrs. Hill.

Work of the Red Cross on international, national and local levels was described by Mr. John Wilson of Toronto, president-elect of Red Cross in Ontario. He said that Richmond Hill was one of the few communities of its size without a Red Cross branch. Five of its public schools and one high school already had junior Red Cross branches, he said. The cost of Red Cross only amounted to thirty cents per head for every Canadian, said Mr. Wilson, as he described its many services, including help in time of disaster.

Told About Congo It would take a generation for the Congo to settle down, one small one with cities as modern as any in the world built by the Belgians and taking in only four per cent of the country's population. A larger segment, taking in 13 per cent, consisted of company towns in connection with mines and industrial activities. The remainder lived on a very low plane of existence.

Responsibility for the troubles in the Congo was laid squarely at the door of the Belgians, said Mr. Baetz. They had run everything and, overnight, had pulled out leaving the task of government to completely untrained people. A man who had been a clerk one day found himself a cabinet minister the next, said Mr. Baetz, leading to unbelievable chaos. A resident of a shack, promoted in the effort to get government going, found himself the occupant of a big, modern house built for a Belgian official. So rapid was the change that, with all the modern facilities available, his family would be found cooking over an open fire in the yard. Mr. Baetz described the work which had been done by the Red Cross in fighting disease and maintaining life.

W. E. BUTLIN one small one with cities as modern as any in the world built by the Belgians and taking in only four per cent of the country's population.

A veteran, present at the meeting, said that after seventeen years he was happy to have the opportunity of saying "thank you" to the Red Cross for what it had done for him and many others who, as prisoners of war, had received invaluable Red Cross parcels.

Seek Psychiatric Ward At Newmarket Hospital

The Board of Governors of the York County Hospital at Newmarket at their March 21st meeting received a delegation from the York County Health Unit and the Canadian Mental Health Association to discuss the addition of a twenty psychiatric beds to the plans for the hospital. Dr. Robert King, medical officer of health for the county spoke on the general need for this type of ward and advised the board that grants of $250,000, were available to help with the costs involved, subject of course to government approval at all levels.

Dr. King further told the board that psychiatric beds were now being discussed and incorporated in the plans of other hospitals in the province, citing the hospital at Brampton, the Sarnia Hospital and the Branson Hospital in North York. Dr. S. E. Jensen, director of the York County Mental Health Clinic at Newmarket presented a brief which outlined the advantages to patient, community and hospital in having a psychiatric treatment centre in a community hospital. A patient admitted to such a ward is attended by his own doctor, his own family is within easy reach, he does not have to be certified, and is thereby able to retain the privileges of his citizenship. Should a patient in another ward of the hospital develop serious nervous symptoms, expert psychiatric help is at hand, immediately.

Patients in a psychiatric ward in a modern hospital are no longer subject to the restraint imposed by the custodial methods which necessitated barred windows and locked doors in the mental hospitals built a hundred years ago. With the development of modern psychiatry and in the most up-to-date surroundings patients generally respond to treatment in a matter of thirty days, rather than, as previously, a matter of three years. Wards are open and patients move freely about, occupying themselves with games, crafts and visitors.

One of the greatest evils attached to mental illness, that of "stigma" which affects not only the patient but the family and the entire community is thereby removed as patients in these wards are not certified and it is generally conceded that they are suffering from some nervous disorder. Chairman Charles Reesor of Markham Village of the county board of health spoke in support of the proposal and drew attention to the very strong representation from the mental health association which included former Warden W. L. Clark of Unionville, and Councillor Mrs. F. P. Moffatt of the Aurora Town Council.

Mrs. P. A. Townshend-Carter of Thornhill, president of the mental health association told the board something of the association and its activities. Several very pertinent questions were asked and Dr. King offered all the help needed in investigating the possibility of including such a set-up in county hospital plans.

These proposals were received with interest and sympathy by the board of governors as meriting serious investigation.

At the March meeting of the executive of the York-Simcoe Home and School Council, held at the door of the Belgians, said the speaker was introduced by John Passmore of Jefferson, former president of the Ontario division of the Red Cross Society, and thanked by President F. J. Pickering of Richmond Hill Chamber of Commerce, who spoke of his personal experiences with the Red Cross both in war and peace. Reeve Floyd Perkins, representing the mayor, extended a welcome and was complimented by the Ontario president-elect on his knowledge of Red Cross history. The reeve, endorsing the formation of a Richmond Hill and district unit, explained that he had formerly been a school teacher and, as such, had had an intimate connection with junior Red Cross.

Some people felt that children really cannot understand the subject. Mr. McDiarmid demonstrated that even by answering children's first questions "Why?" and "How?" intelligently, we are acquainting them with the first glimpse of the world around them. Children of kindergarten age are asked to classify things in two groups—either—living or never having lived and from their basic knowledge all matter is broken down into its various categories and studied to different degrees as the child proceeds through his school years.

Mr. McDiarmid has a wealth of knowledge on his subject and with the aid of prepared leaflets and an excellent film, he impressed on the parents the fact that science, if taught with the right approach, is not nearly as difficult as some people are inclined to believe. Refreshments rounded out a pleasant evening.

Parents and friends of the Association are asked to set aside April 13th as a special date. It will be our annual "fun" night. This year the main attraction will be a first rate show for the students plus added attractions for parents and excellent door prizes. Please keep this date in mind. Mark it on your calendar today.

Hillsview Crossing Protection Planned Protection is to be provided at the Hillsview crossing, Markham Township Council has decided. The road approaching the crossing will be widened and signals will be installed. The township will pay twelve and a half per cent of the installation cost and 50 per cent of maintenance.

AURORA: Town council authorized its solicitor to proceed with legal action against Consolidated Building Corporation to collect approximately $7,000 said to be the balance due on adjustments in connection with the Regency Acres Sub-division.

Annual Spring Fair Canadian Achievements In Arts & Crafts Local Horticultural Theme

By Elisabeth Grant It's coming — "Canadiana", the 1962 version of the annual Spring Fair of the Horticultural Society on Saturday, April 14, from 1 to 6 o'clock at the Lions' Community Hall. Each year the society presents this fair as the high spot of its year's activities to familiarize the public with its work and to provide funds for its educational programme and for civic improvements. It also offers gay and colourful entertainment against a horticultural background. This year the background will also be Canadian achievements in the arts and crafts, Dominion-wide.

The current presentation covers a very wide area and has been made possible by the cooperation of many agencies. The Canadian Handicrafts Guild is sending exhibits illustrative of the arts and crafts of the provinces. There will also be an opportunity for local artists and craftsmen to show what is being done in our own town. An internationally known collection of original paintings "The Gallery of Canadian History" has been procured. The Canadian Tourist Association is sending posters of provincial scenes. The entire decor and theme of the show will be that of Canadians.

Gardening Tips The information bureau will feature advice from gardening experts. The committee on civic improvement has well advanced plans for tree planting and will offer property owners advice and lists of suitable trees. There will be a display of the latest and most valuable in books, periodicals and government bulletins. Coloured slides will be shown throughout the afternoon. The naturalists will have a display, bringing in a breath of spring from the great outdoors and there will be booths par-veying plants and cut flowers and demonstrations of flower arranging. On stage the Dennis Moore ganders will bring their own interpretation of the spring and fair time. The library puppeteers will delight the children. Tea Garden No fair would be complete without its good things to eat and the pretty tea garden with its decorations of provincial flowers will provide a place for friends to meet and relax over the cup that cheers. There will be a snack bar for the youngsters too. Visitors need take no thought for dessert on that day for the home baking booth will live up to its reputation of the best in pies, cakes and cookies. So come to the fair! And be sure to come early. When you leave do take along with you flowers and cookies, a membership card. To associate yourself with the horticulture society is to become a part of an interesting and worthwhile endeavour. At the municipal hall, the library and the churches, wherever you see their sign, the horticultural society has been there. Join the good cause.
