Drivers Choice - Which One Is Right?

You have to move fast nowadays to keep up with the population of Richmond Hill. When a photographer from "The Liberal" passed the sign to the south of the town on Bayview Avenue (left), the population was only 16,030. When he entered town from the south on Yonge Street (right), only hours later, the population had already sky-rocketed to 17,600. Perhaps the prediction of the Potvin Report that the town will have 50,000 people by 1981 is a little conservative.

CNR Work On Schedule For Terminal Project

Teams of construction and railway crews continue to sustain the on-schedule work program for Canadian National's Toronto Terminal Project. It includes a 34-mile access-line and 1,200-acre freight classification yard slated for completion by early 1965.

In the east, the Henderson Ave., subway and the Woodbine bridge separating rail access-line traffic from roads have been completed, reported John L. Cann, project director.

By Sept. 30 bridges are to be completed at the West and Main Humber River sites, CPR's MacTier subdivision, Woodbridge Rd., and subways at Henderson Ave., Bathurst and Jane Sts., Mr. Cann said.

By mid-October the subway at the Seventh Line, Vaughan Township is to be ready and by the end of the month the east and west Don River bridges and subways at Bayview Ave., and Dufferin Sts., will be completed.

Grading of various sections of the access-line from Milton to Bayview ranged from 60 to 90 per cent complete. By Oct. 1, track-laying crews will begin laying line on the section between Georgetown and Milton and ballasting operations will be carried out concurrently. Work on a set-off yard near Malton will begin in mid-September.

Considerable installation of signals has been made at Georgetown and this work is continuing at Dunbarton to the Newmarket CN subdivision. Buried cable is to be laid this fall on the Milton subdivision between there and Georgetown.

Clearing and fencing of the right-of-way between Dunbarton and the Bala subdivision has begun and is to be completed by Nov. 30, the project engineer said.

CN Telecommunications engineers and technicians now are working with their railway counterparts on aspects of signalling and telecommunications for the project.

Turning from the access-line to the yard, 24½ miles of track have been laid in the yard to date this year and 188 switches have been installed.

Some 60 miles of track are to be laid by year's end. The yard is between Jane and Keele Sts. with its entrance at Highway No. 7.

Two hump bridges and a bridge separating road and rail traffic at Sherwood Road are nearing completion.

In both the access-line and yard field offices plans are being completed for remaining work. Within the next month contracts are to be advertised for six more bridges and grade separations on the access-line.

Contracts for six buildings to be constructed in the yard are also to be advertised in the near future.

All of the access-line will be signalled by Centralized Traffic Control while inside the yard a complex of television, two-way radio, radar, electronic equipment and analog computers will be utilized to sort out freight trains utilizing gravity flow.

Some 7,000 cars a day can be handled at what will be the Toronto Yard.
