Wreck Escaped Killed Sunday On Bayview Ave.

A car driven by Barbara Macdonald, 25, of Blue Grass Blvd., Richmond Hill, collided with and killed a roving cow Sunday on Bayview Avenue in North York, according to police.

Police say the six to eight-month Hereford heifer, weighing about 500 pounds, stepped in front of the Macdonald car.

Mrs. Macdonald was uninjured and damage to the car was slight.

The cow had been roaming through North York and had eluded police since escaping from last Sunday's CNR train wreck.

Several householders in the area had reported seeing the animal said police, but investigation failed to locate it. The animal was covered with burrs, indicating it had been roaming in the bush for some time.

Other cattle from the freight train derailment near Leslie Street and Sheppard Avenue, may also be loose in North York, police say.

Railway investigators claim they do not know whether all of the estimated 200 cattle involved in the wreck have been accounted for.
