

A Politicians Best Friend

Although it is customary for politicians to kiss babies at this time of year, Richmond Hill Mayor James Haggart, centre, and Vaughan Township Reeve Albert Rutherford, left, found "Timmy" the centre of interest at "Open House" held last week at Canine Control Kennels on Dufferin Street while Canine Control Officer James Ryan looks on. Mr. Ryan showed municipal officials how the kennels are operated and took them on a tour of his modern establishment.

Reject Proposal For County-Wide Assessment Plan

York County Council Friday afternoon rejected a county-wide assessment set-up. Although a vote of council did favor county assessment, provincial legislation requires unanimous consent of all council members.

A county assessor may still be appointed by the councils of the individual municipalities.

In a report to county council, the assessment committee suggested a county-wide assessment organization would make more uniform assessment possible.

A staff of about 21 assessors and six office workers would be necessary for a county assessment office, the report indicated. Main administrative offices for county assessment would be located in Newmarket, with branch offices in the south and north.

Assessment personnel under the 14 municipalities in the county includes 20 full-time assessors, four part-time and six full-time clerks.

Estimated cost of county administration of assessment would be $173,400 compared with a total cost of $175,862 under the present municipal administration.

County assessment has been under discussion by council for some time.
