ding opened for the purpose of allowing the troops some form of relaxation. There was nothing else to do but relax. We played the old standards and modern pops with our 15 piece dance band and we were just as happy to be kept busy at all times. There was no radio, no food, nothing in the way of beverage except some lukewarm liquid supposedly tea simply because it was of a similar color. The building was unheated and it was wintry outside. They weren't relaxed, they were simply numbed into a state of apathy. The band music did bring a little bit of North America to the boys and this was as close as we could get to Canada by playing the One O'clock Jump, Take the A Train, Long Ago and Far Away, etc. Besides when the troops saw the band they usually felt secure in themselves since what would a band be doing there if it wasn't safe.

That night we had to play a midnight service for a regiment in the Ravenna Opera House. It was even colder that evening. Most of the windows were broken and of course heat was unheard of. The cold bleak winds would cut across the huge opera stage and drive into our "properly dressed" bodies like sharp knives, though most of us prepared for such occasions with inner comfort and consolation. Most of the troops that night were even more prepared. Our garb was normally barbaric. We had been ordered to wear what was fit to keep out cold except on special parades such as this. My unusual attire was a pair of issue hip length rubber boots turned down at the knee in pirate fashion, a home made (Italian tailor) leather jerkin built around an army greatcoat, a blue turtle neck sweater and a fur head piece on top of the heap. Needless to say I was considered quite conservative.

It was usual at Christmas time (as still is) for the troops to partake at all costs of the best Yuletide feast and this season was no exception. Some big building would be set up for the feast and the officers and N.C.O.'s would serve and do the dishes. We played for quite a few in and around the Christmas time and were so busy that we forgot our own little Christmas dinner which strangely enough fell on Christmas Day, so it was without any thought of anything except just another meal (with turkey?). We would take our issue mess tins, our tin cups and gather the fare all into the one pot then spread off to sit on some steps, or back into the cold room, where we would dine in the normal drab fashion. However, it was here that several of the band boys got busy on their own (bless their busy little souls) and scrounged up some old tables from somewhere, took them into one of the longer rooms, set them up and put the bed blankets over the top in place of table cloths. Some one even draped up blankets over the broken windows to keep the draught out and as if this were not enough, each member had his name written on a piece of paper as a place card to show where he was to be seated.

It was gay with happy chit chat, Merry Christmas! - all that sort of thing - everyone looking surprised as they came in and sat down - hey, not there! - here's your place - can't you read? Turkey in a mess tin, and hot, hot tea. Christmas in Ravenna, Italy, 1944 - my sixth one away from home - others the same too.

We were happy and jolly. A strange kind of happiness brought about by the knowledge that for a moment there was "Peace on Earth" though GOODWILL toward MEN was sold short. We were jolly because it took only small distractions to make you feel home. Perhaps we thought of home, the loved ones, the world we had left behind, perhaps we thought of nothing at all but the pleasure of the moment at hand.

No one said Grace before meal but I know now that each and everyone of us with the knowledge of the devastation and deprivation surrounding us on that Christmas Day 1944 quietly thanked God for the food set before us and that we were being allowed to partake of His gifts.

The Doncaster Community Ladies Club gave out 15 Christmas baskets of food and 10 boxes of chocolates to the senior citizens of the community.
Faye and Gordon of the Villa Hospital, who are wards of the Doncaster Community Ladies Club have received Christmas baskets.

Gabriela Benic of 113 Henderson Ave., celebrated her sixth birthday December 21.
Doncaster's Golden Hawks hockey team remained undefeated as they trounced the Rangers 7 to 1 December 16.
In the first game of Sunday night doubleheader, the Habs broke loose to whip the Rose-lawn Dairy team, 11-7.
With this last victory of the Golden Hawks they clinched the championship of series "A". On January 13 the players will all be presented with crests.
Next games will be at Bradford Arena January 6, starting at 7 p.m.
In the first event, the Rangers and the Habs will do battle for second place while in the second contest at 8 p.m. the Doncaster club will go against Willowdale.

To all residents and readers of the Doncaster news, season's greetings and all the best in the New Year from your correspondent.
