Patients In The Corridors

Accommodations at York County Hospital in Newmarket are so crowded that patients must be placed in busy corridors. Patient in foreground is Wilfred Robson of Aurora. The current County of York United Hospitals campaign hopes to raise sufficient funds to expand Newmarket Hospital and build a new one at Richmond Hill.

Plant Closes Operation 120 Employees Laid Off

The closing comes despite the fact prospects for the Canadian textile industry are brighter than they have been for a number of years, Mr. Young said.

Most of the employees will not benefit much from the company's pension plan.

"Most of us have only been with the firm for about three years," explained assistant mill superintendent George Uppington, "and you had to be with the firm two years continuously before you became eligible."

Employees will only get back the five per cent of their wages they paid into the fund when they were laid off. "There's no other severance pay I'm aware of," Mr. Uppington said.

A special meeting is to be called by Woodbridge Village Council to discuss the situation.

Reeve Norn Garriock expressed hope the village would be able to attract another industry to occupy the plant.
