one funny story and that one leads to another. Last week we heard a funny ice fishing story and got two back for one. Talk about casting your bread on the waters! A well known ice fishing operator at Lake Simcoe took an English couple, man and wife, on their first ice fishing trip. On the way out to the hut they fired questions thick and fast - faster than he could answer them in any case. This man is renowned for his sense of humour and he can ad lib beautifully. After a host of other questions they finally inquired about what was used for bait. They were told that minnows would be used and inevitably they wanted to know how to get them onto a hook. With a perfectly straight face our hero told them to squeeze the minnows until the tongues stuck out and then to slip the hook through the extended tongue.

After twenty minutes or so of vainly squeezing minnows they reported failure and were then shown an alternative method - - - the right one.
