 hurtling down slopes, some to spill ignominiously while others come down with a contemptuous ease and grace most often seen in a bull fighter. Real virtuosos come swinging madly down hill employing a technique known as wedeln or tail-wagging. A real tail-wagging expert makes a pair dancing the twist look like your great aunt Bertha performing a stately minuet - wearing snow shoes, of course.
 Just like every other sport skiing has a jargon all it's very own. Only difference is there seems to be more of it. Much more. Once again skiing seems somewhat akin to bull fighting in the amount and style of dialectics employed.
 You can schuss, slalom, sitzmork, christie, gellendesprung, you can also traverse, herring-bone or step christie if you so desire. Stops are made by snowplowing or stemming or just plain falling - a tree in the way can also be an aid to a sudden stop. If you do use a tree to stop be sure it's a soft maple otherwise the results can be downright abominable. And yet the bodies continue to hurtle ever downward and who cares for a tree?
 Some of the best scenery centres around the club house. That's where the snow bunnies, dressed to play with little or no intention of skiing, congregate. Eventually, some time during the day every eligible male is bound to pass through at least once and who knows what might develop? It's a college boys delight and an old roue's heaven!
 No matter whether you ski or are just a snow bunny watcher you must admit that skiing is definitely big business. Any skier who takes the slopes these days has an investment of close to $100.00 in clothes and equipment. And this is the bare minimum. Skis at $200.00 and better are seen frequently enough to be commonplace while a pair of ski slacks can give you a few cents change for a fifty dollar bill. European ski boots with $80.00 price tags are as common as ants at a picnic. Racks to carry skis on cars have been designed to fit all cars from stately Cadillacs to tiny European bugs. And most of these also bear fancy price tags. Everyone in the trade just loves the whole deal!
 No matter whether you have the latest equipment or not one thing is still the same. The hills are just as fast on a pair of $20.00 skis and your success depends entirely on your own skill and sense of balance. A day out on the hills can make you feel like a king, give you the appetite of a bear after hibernation and make you so dog-boned (yawn) tired!
 And so away we go to the hills and dales. Don't forget the wax for wet, dry, powdery, greasy, slippery snow; but above all Mom, please don't forget to pack the salami! It could be a long, long weekend! Let's also make sure that the liniment supply is adequate shall we?

Ice Fishing Slow In Simcoe Area

Reports from ice fishing centres on Lake Simcoe seem to indicate the fish are rapidly losing interest in the entire operation.
 Early harvests of dozens of fish per party seem to have become a thing of the past. Last weekend a catch of only half a dozen fish to a two-man party was common.
 Hut operators hold to the theory of overbaiting. Holes are being well baited with salted minnows, pot barley, macaroni and other types of food enabling the fish to pick and choose their fare.
 As a result the fish appetites are becoming dulled and slim catches are resulting.
 Most fish last weekend were caught before noon and a lot of fishermen drew complete blanks on their expeditions.
 Most action of all was reported from Oro Station where the voracious herring were being taken in fairly large numbers.
