Make Presentation

The April meeting of the Thornhill-Richmond Hill Ministerial was held in the parish hall of St. Mary's Anglican Church. A delicious buffet lunch was served by the ladies of St. Mary's, who were thanked by the chairman, Rev. Dil. Evans of Thornhill.

The special nature of this monthly meeting was in recognition of two ministers who are leaving the area. They are the Rev. "Bill" Patterson and the Rev. "Dick" Moore. In presenting farewell gifts in the form of books to the brethren the chairman spoke of their enduring qualities. The Rev. Wm. Patterson by his dynamic friendliness has prodded the organization into many of its most worthwhile activities. In the case of the Rev. J. R. F. Moore mention was made of his particular gifts in the field of teacher training.

The final and concluding meeting of the season will be held in Holy Trinity Church, Thornhill.

Students Hosts To Visitors

Enthusiasm was the key-note of the open house at Thornhill Secondary School last Friday. Every classroom, shop and lab in the school was staffed with a group of lively, interested students, all eager to explain to the constant stream of visitors just what they were studying.

It was difficult to get past the foyer where a foot-tapping musical ensemble "The Continentals", complete with piano, guitar, bass, drums and trombone were setting the pace for the evening, beating out a medley of popular tunes, old and new.

In the electricity and electronics shop a group of intent young men were concerned with various pieces of electronic testing equipment. On view were such things as a stereo set, and a pair of racing cars operating on a track, demonstrating the solenoid principle. One interesting piece of equipment was labelled "look at your voice". Here, voices of different pitch and intensity spoken into the attached microphone made a different pattern of waves on a tiny screen.

In the auto mechanics shop an equally serious group of young men demonstrated an engine analyzer, a spark plug tester and other pieces of equipment, while up on the deck, a car was being lubricated.

In the boys occupations room, several youngsters were absorbed in doing sheet metal work, while two others were tiling the walls of a small room. Mr. R. Harvey was in charge and advised that the entire room had been built by students and would be completely finished and painted by them. Mr. Harvey has 19 boys in grade 9 and 12 in grade 10 and reports that they are very enthusiastic about their work - which was quite obvious from their happy concentration on it.

An interesting item in the girls occupations room was a series of photographs of a fashion show the girls from this course had put on at Savette on April 5 and 6. This course is designed to acquaint the girls with various aspects of the wholesale retail and service occupations.

The drafting room had a fine architectural model of the school on display, while in the machine shop was a model ship. The wood shop was humming with activity with the boys intent on various types of woodworking.

The entire technical department, which was open to the public for the first time, gives a most favourable impression, with the bright clean, rooms, well lit and airy, full of the bustle of purposeful work. The technical wing is joined to the rest of the school on the west side by an attractive "glazed corridor", which encloses in the centre of the school a quadrangle of bright grass.

Here, incidentally, members of the model airplane club demonstrated their fascinating "controlled light" model planes. They also had a room allotted to them on the upper floor and had an amazing collection of some 30 planes on view, all built by members of the club. They were in all sizes, some up to a 48 inch wing span and were designed for either free flight, radio control or with a control line. This club is in its second year of operation.

The boys in this club are obviously all "real nuts" about planes and full of all kinds of technical information and descriptions that left this reporter slightly dazed - especially since they were so eager to inform evening, with people including their way along within the roped-off corridors past the various fascinating exhibits. In room 108 grade 9 and 10 students were demonstrating "The Many Facets of Science". One youngster demonstrated the properties of positive and negative electricity, with all the clan of a sideshow barker, and his enthusiasm was highly contagious.

In another of the labs a cat and a frog were being dissected (although I must confess I didn't watch this too closely) and in the chemistry lab various experiments and demonstrations were going on. A competent young man carefully explained a spectroscopy to me, which was demonstrating the spectrum of hydrogen gas; another serious and intent young scientist demonstrated how sympathetic vibrations are set up, while still another coaxed various young ladies to place their hands on a Van De Graaf generator and see their hair stand up on end. (This young man was a little put out when this experiment didn't work with some of the girls - evidently he doesn't know about the lacquer hair sprays).

And what do you suppose an English room could display to interest such varied visitors? As well as copies of various books and a "reading laboratory" kit to help retarded readers, a tape recorder was busy playing excerpts from Pygmalion and Antony and Cleopatra, spoken by the students and on the wall there was a series of vocabulary tests for both parents and students. These varied all the way from a very simple one to one titled "If you pass this you have every right to be a snob". I came away deciding I certainly never could be a good snob when I missed "rodomontade", discovered it just means "vain boasting" - must try to work it into my next column).

However, I was a little perplexed up to find I could pick out 14 of the 15 spelling mistakes in the paragraph pinned up on the wall to test your spelling - although I couldn't possibly tell you the right way to spell the words, as my editor would no doubt attest.

The art room was well and thoroughly visited during the evening where visitors were treated to a variety of art forms all the way from pencil sketches to linoleum mosaics. Students were working on enamelling on copper and various types of mosaic work with glazed tiles and tiny pieces of linoleum, while their enthusiastic teacher, Mrs. Trot, conducted visitors around the room proudly displaying the work of her accomplished and talented pupils.

Unfortunately, I was unable to spend as much time as I would have liked in the home economics room both because my small son exclaimed flatly on entering "There's nothing to interest me here" and because by this time it was almost 10 p.m. However, I did do a whirlwind tour, long enough to admire and envy the beautiful workmanship evidenced in the dazzling array of suits, dresses, skirts, knitted sweaters and baby clothes which were so attractively displayed against a colorful background of festoons of fabrics. It is not hard to imagine the pride and satisfaction with which these garments will be worn.

A quick trip through room 201 of the home economics department showed me a fine display of food and nutrition, including home made pickles made by the girls last fall, fancy cakes, a cheese tray and several types of mouth-watering breads. Both this room and the room with the clothing, were graced with attractive floral arrangements by grade 11 students.

Mr. Foley's history room was enlivened by his own effervescent presence as well as an absorbing display of old Toronto newspapers, dating from 1914 to 1955. A sample history lesson was on the blackboard and maps and historical pictures were much in evidence.

In the library (where it was blessedly possible to sit down and make notes, discreetly kicking shoes off under the table) visitors were graciously welcomed by members of the cast of Thornhill's prize winning (Continued On Page 17)

A.Y.P.A. Drama Festival Saturday

The first York Deane Young People's Drama Festival is scheduled for Wrixon Hall, St. Mary's Anglican Church, Richmond Hill, this Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m.

Young people's groups from three churches - St. Phillips Unionville, St. Mary's Richmond Hill, and Trinity Church Aurora - have each entered a one-act, twenty-minute play in the competition. Former Manitoba radio personality Scott Maxwell is assisting the Unionville group, and Ken Williams of Rockport Crescent is directing St. Mary's entry. Scott is president and Ken is second-president of the sponsoring group.

In a recent draw competition in Aurora, the Trinity Church representatives placed second, which is an indication of the excellent calibre of entertainment the public may expect on May 11.

A former protegee of Sir Alex Guinness, Mr. Tim Findly, will be the adjudicator. Mr. Findly is a well known actor of London's West End, Broadway and many CBC plays as well as playing local theatres.
