Anniversary Service
Members of Headford United Church united with Browns Corners congregation on the occasion of their 121st anniversary services May 5.

The morning service was taken by Rev. Ernest Howse of Bloor Street United Church. Dr. Howse spoke on applied religion. His message was a penetrating analysis of the dangers that beset a Christian who considers practical humanitarianism full Christian service. People who read, "and Jesus went about doing good" have a tendency to confine Christianity to only "doing good" Dr. Howse pointed out that this can only end in defeat. With a bit of humour and a rhyme about a woman whose time was consumed in doing good by way of committee meetings and banquet meetings until she died from sheer exhaustion in fruitless activity. Too often, Dr. Howse said, doing good became mainly "going about". The necessary other facet in Christian living is declared in the statement that Jesus went alone to pray.

The basic message was that no one can continue to create without personal re-creation. There can be no continued out-go without take-in.

Dr. Howse quoted that 95 per cent of humanitarian services in the world had their inspiration in the church pews but unless the service is upheld through a faith that is born of communion between God and the soul, there can be no lasting good.

School Exhibition
Headford parents attending Thornhill Secondary School open house, when school facilities were open for inspection and students were demonstrating methods of work, report it a rewarding experience.

Students from Headford who engaged their interest were, Sharon Rumble in the science room busy explaining the siphon. John Rumble and colleague mixed science and non-science as they told fortunes through the medium of changing colours resulting from hydrogen sulphide salts mixes. A skirt made by Sharon Johnson was admired, and to quote a young viewer, "Albert Leek had an oscillator - a black box with buttons and things that moved." Not too clear a description but enough to interest younger students.

A wedding of interest to Headford was that of Miss Marion Phillips to Mr. Peter Verheul, both of Newmarket. Mr. Verheul is a brother of Mrs. Martin vanTol. Martin acted as best man for the groom and the bride was attended by

Chief Robbins Claims No Intimidation Used

Chief Constable R. P. Robbins of Richmond Hill when interviewed by 'The Liberal' on his current endeavor to remove "obscene" literature from local news stands, claimed he was not intimidating anyone, and that he took objection to a recent editorial in the Toronto Globe and Mail inferring he had done so.

"At no time have I used intimidation," stated the chief constable. "All I have done is look over the paper back books on the racks of the local dealers, and those I find obscene in my opinion, I draw to the storekeeper's attention and ask him to withdraw these from sale until passed by the Attorney-General's advisory panel on obscene literature."

"This is not a crusade, it's just my way of trying to rid the community of some filthy writing that is being published by two firms in particular," he said.

He claimed most retailers had been co-operative, and that many Richmond Hill residents had commended him on his one-man campaign.

Asked if he would be discouraged if some of the books which he already had submitted to the advisory panel are returned as fit for public sale, Chief Robbins said he would be rather surprised if this should happen.

"Lady Chatterly's Lover" could be considered a fine old Victorian novel suitable for any library shelf compared to the ones I have picked up and sent in," replied the chief.
