School, Home Affected If Student Too Active

Toronto Family Court Judge Margaret Chambers told the annual meeting of York-Simcoe Home and School Association's Council in Richmond Hill recently, the child who is active in too many groups may lose interest in both school work and home.

Judge Chambers said the tendency for most young people is to spread their activities too much with the result both home and school lives suffer. She pointed out parents should decide how much outside activity is good for their children and stick to their decision.

Mrs. A. F. Toogood of Unionville, until recently a vice-president of the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations, discussed controversial changes in per capita fees and explained how monies paid to the federation are used. She also outlined changes to be made in home and school organization at all levels.

Mrs. J. Fitcher, vice-president of area "D" explained the new organization and how it pertains to both councils and association.

The study guide "Meet Your School Age Child" was the topic of Mrs. R. Farrell, provincial chairman of Family Life. She commended the council for using it as their theme.

"Cheating" was discussed by Stouffville school teacher W. Kingsley who noted differences in children's personalities and upbringing and their effect on ideas of right and wrong.

Speakers were introduced by Council resident Mrs. W. Noble and thanked by Mr. A. Martin of Nobleton.

Mrs. Toogood installed the following as executive for 1963-64: Mrs. Noble, president; Mr. W. Betts, Newmarket and Mrs. F. Goodwin, Thornhill, vice-presidents; Mr. Hunt, Nobleton, treasurer; Mrs. A. McCarthy, Nobleton, recording secretary; Mrs. S. Lawder, Nobleton, corresponding secretary and executive members, Mrs. L. Boyd, Maple; Mrs. J. Van Den Beld, Nobleton and Mrs. J. Ralph, Aurora.

Nature Notes

By Richmond Hill Naturalists

Variation adds spice to outdoor observations and this spring is no exception for Richmond Hill Naturalists. May 9 was a perfect day - visibility clear, temperature around 60 degrees and leaves still small giving a clear outline to all trees.

Birds were busily feeding in between bursts of song. The most spectacular were the rose-breasted grosbeaks with their robin-like but sweeter and more liquid songs and the Baltimore Orioles with their mellow whistles. Both species were feeding low in the shrubbery and that gave the group several opportunities to admire their brilliant plumages.

The ground feeders, ovenbirds, sparrows and thrushes, as usual, made the observers feel very frustrated. Their perfect camouflage markings blend in with the grasses and twigs and only occasionally can one get a full glimpse.

The song sparrow is very helpful because he frequently sings on a bare branch and sings but the thrushes insist on being secretive. The warblers were everywhere - chestnut-sided, Nashville, blackburnian, black-throated blue, black-throated green, magnolia, Cape May, palm and yellow. A golden-winged created great excitement. One observer identified him and because it was a 'first' for this area it was necessary to re-locate him to get positive identification by more than one person. He was most elusive which added greatly to the suspense. Finally, after thirty minutes, he came into view. Friday began as a very blustery, cold, rainy day. Some enthusiasts were keen enough to venture out to see what the night's migration might have brought in. The previous day's hordes had definitely gone on their way without anything much coming in. Everything, including the people, was slightly dampish and visibility was very poor. The least flycatchers were flitting here and there amongst the low shrubbery and seemed to be the only feathered beings who were enjoying the inclement weather.

Saturday the club was supposed to have an organized field trip but only five braved the 32 degree temperature. The bird call, heard from the vicinity of the golf course, which had been puzzling many for the past few days was clarified by Russell Tilt as a western meadowlark. It is to be hoped the golfers enjoy its mellow, flute-like bubbling notes as much as the naturalists. A long-billed marsh wren surprised the group by popping out from a heap of scraggy twigs to scold us emphatically. Many of the tree-top insect feeders were on the ground feeding which is always a thrill - warbler, myrtle, canada, magnolia, redstart and yellow. Catbirds were numerous. Two common terns and a solitary sandpiper were two of this vicinity's migratory birds listed.

Sunday evening was slightly warmer but the warblers were still feeding on the ground. A ploughed field at the Humber was alive with gaily coloured birds. The blackburnians, yellow-billed cuckoos, the several orioles didn't over-shadow the smaller species. About fifteen rose-breasted grosbeaks, feeding in a nearby tall elm tree, added their share of colour. A hermit thrush sang its beautiful bugle notes from the woods beyond. All in all a perfect ending to a spring evening.

The club is having two field trips - one on May 18, at the Mill St. pond area at 7.30 a.m. and the second on May 19, to Holland Marsh, meeting at the town hall, Wright and Yonge Streets, at 1.30 p.m. The last indoor meeting will be on May 24 and the speaker will be our President John Lunn. His subject will be "Birds."
