Group Of Seven Paintings Are Featured At Richmond Hill Library

An art exhibition featuring the Ontario painters of the "Group of Seven" is on display in the Richmond Hill Library during library hours. This exhibition, one of a series provided by the library for the enjoyment of its patrons, is on loan from the Art Institute of Ontario, and has been prepared by the Art Gallery of Toronto.

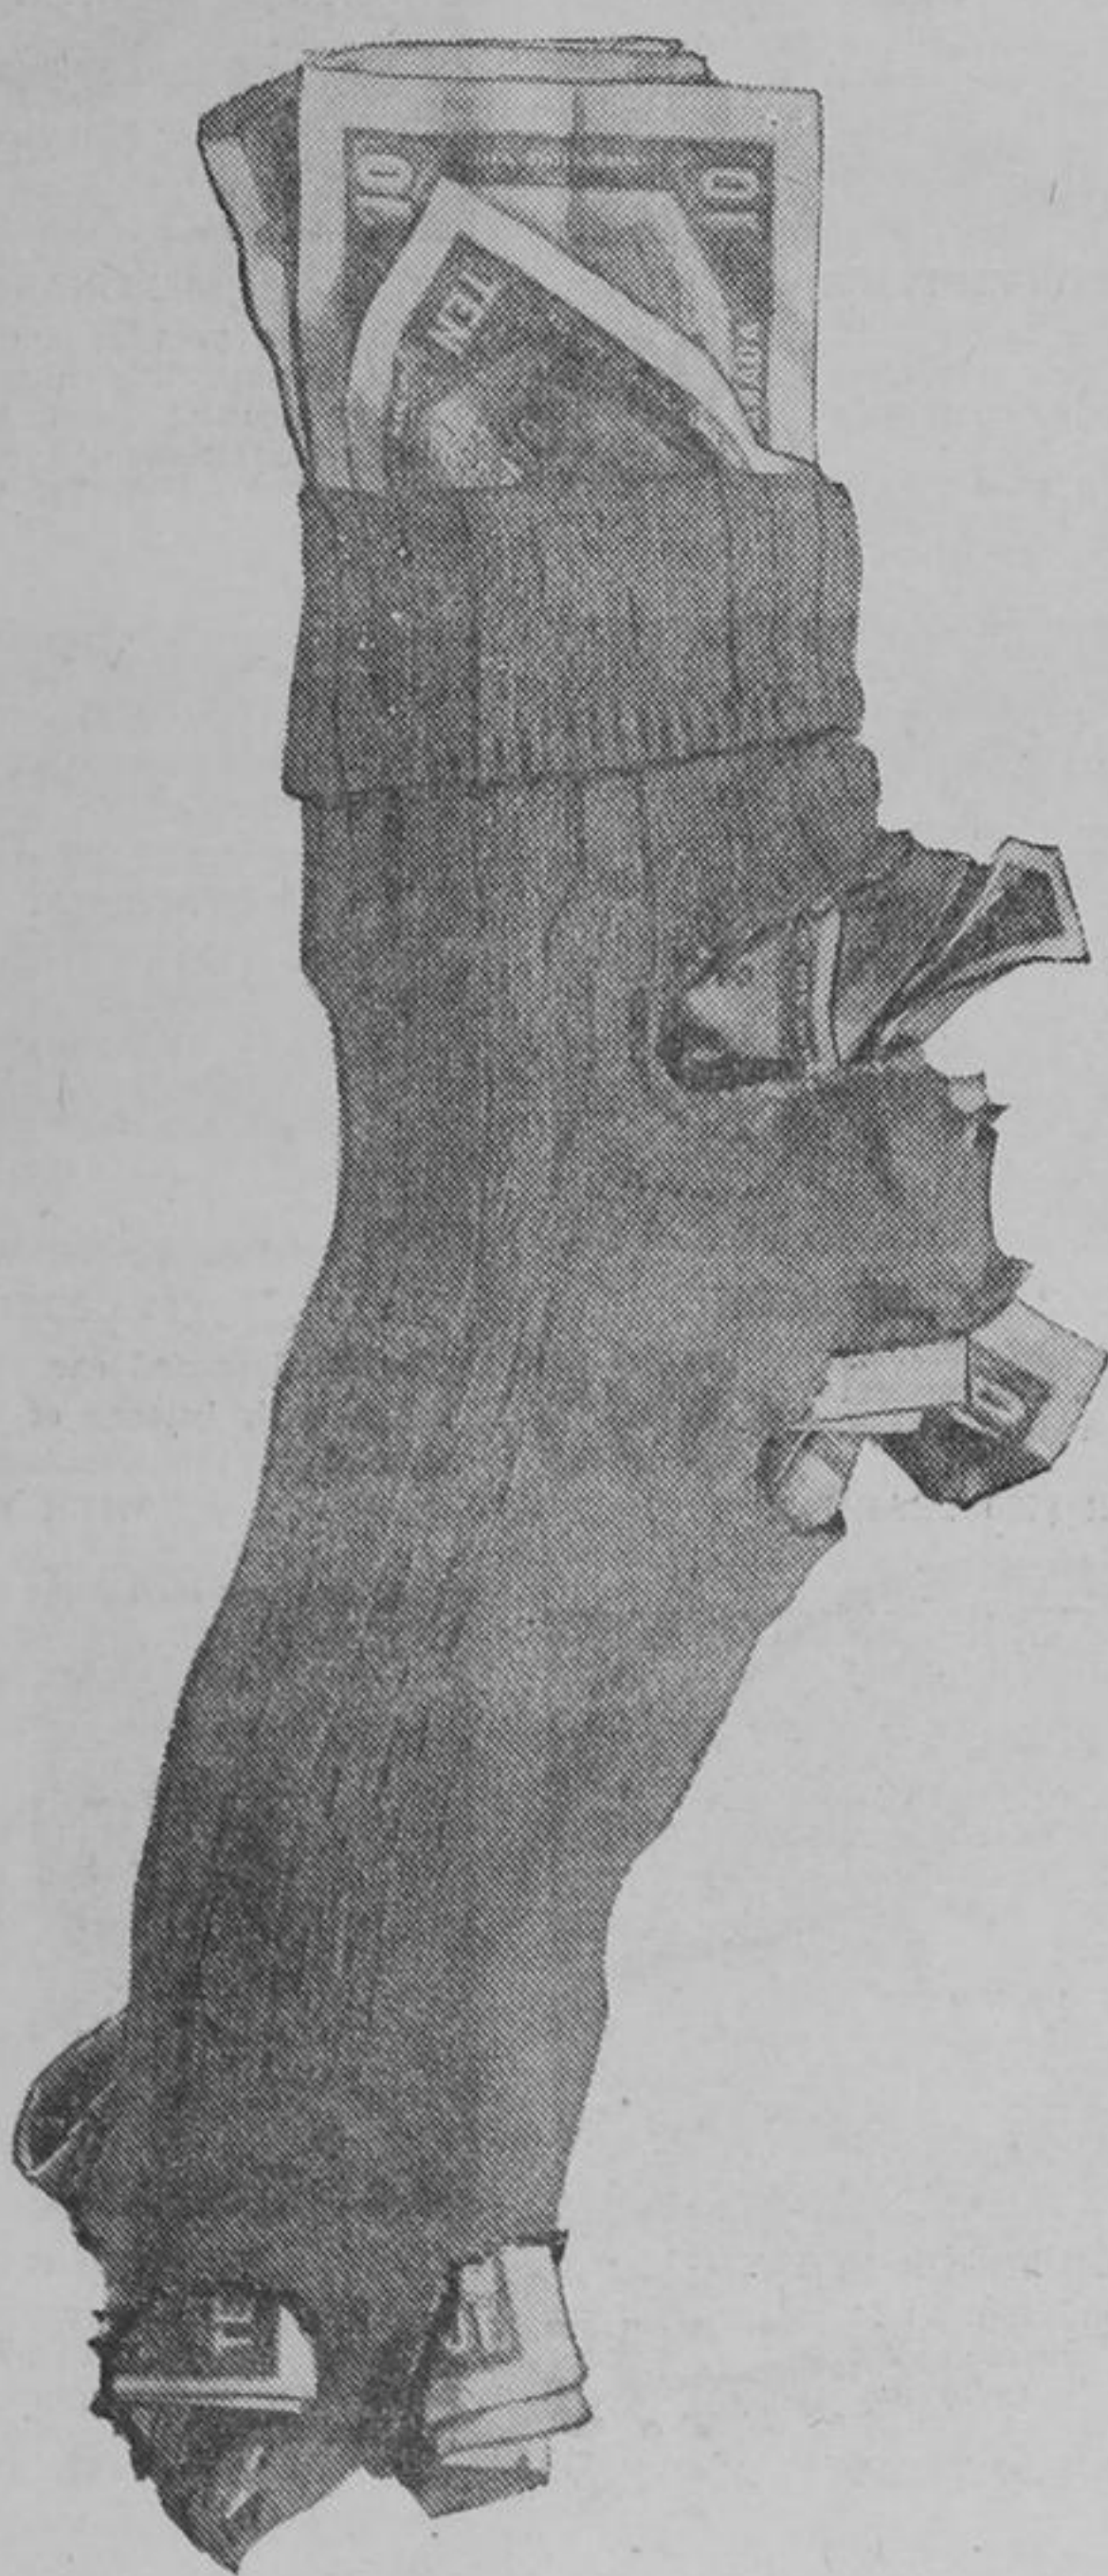

This show undertakes to answer the basic questions as "Who were the painters of the Group of Seven?" "When did they paint?" and "Why did they paint as they did?" Large panels carry biographical material and a portrait of each artist along with a reproduction of one of their paintings. Also included in this exhibition are 10 original oil paintings by this Group of Seven.

This group was prominent during the period of 1920-1933, and was composed of Toronto painters including Lawren Harris, A. Y. Jackson, F. H. Varley, Franklin Carmichael, Franz Johnston, Arthur Lismer and J. E. H. MacDonald. The chief characteristic they shared was stated by Arthur Lismer in 1924: "It is design. We bring out everything in the landscape as a matter of design and also, Ontario, and has been prepared of course of colour. We have got away from French impressionism."

The influence of the Group of Seven decorative school of landscape was dominant in Canadian painting throughout the twenties and thirties. Able artists directly associated with the movement or affected by it included: Alfred J. Casson, Ed- win Holgate, L. L. Fitzgerald, Albert H. Robinson, Lilian Torrance Newton, Pegi Nicol, L. A. C. Pantan, and Charles Comfort.

Top Prizes at Fair For Buttonville Folk
 Buttonville was well represented at Markham Fair and neighbours took home a good many ribbons.

In the black and white cattle judging, Mr. Joe Robinson had the grand champion cow, and in the 4-H Calf Club competition Bill Robinson's yearling calf took the championship, and Bill won the George Darrach Trophy for showmanship. Bill's silage corn was another red ribbon entry.

In the vegetable classes, the Praetres were again in the forefront this year, winning seven firsts, five seconds, three thirds and two fourths. For 18 entries they took home 17 prizes. Their vegetable display is always a work of art—and for many years now they have won first prize in this class—for quality, colour, variety and arrangement. Other firsts were for the squash display, cauliflower (the only one), melon, cucumbers, savoy cabbage (only one), and Hubbard squash. Mrs. Praet
