Pony And Dog In Trouble But It's A Happy Ending

This is a story about a dog and pony who met by chance in Richmond Hill, didn't fall in love, but will winter together this year in Florida.

Of course, there's a possibility the dog will eventually fall in love with an elephant but this comes later in the story.

It began a few days ago when Canine Control Officer Jim Ryan answered a call to Richmond Heights Centre where a shetland pony by name of "Topper" was performing with a little circus.

Topper had become over-enthusiastic and nipped a small boy who was admiring him at too close a range. The boy was treated for his injuries.

The pony, slightly bewildered by it all, was banished to the local dog pound where any self-respecting horse would hesitate to go.

The sentence was a 14-day one imposed as a precaution against the possibility of Topper having contacted rabies in his travels. He hadn't.

Next enters "Butch", a big 14-month old German Shepherd whose secret past includes being part hound dog as well.

It was about the same time as Topper was running into problems that Butch managed to get into some himself.

Butch belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Mildred Snowball of 221 Elka Drive, and their children, Susan, 6, Nancy, 5, Billy, 4, Michael, 2, and Douglas, 1.

Mrs. Snowball explained Butch wasn't used to being tied on a chain. Apparently some children had thrown some sticks at him and Butch's temper became ruffled.

"He was edgy and lately he had nipped some children," Mrs. Snowball said. "He was always good with the children and Michael could even put his feet right in his mouth. But the way he was, we felt it would be safer to get rid of him."

Now it was Butch's turn to be banished to the dog pound.

But his fate might not have been as happy as Topper's. Control Officer Ryan explained it was difficult to find an owner for a dog once convicted of nipping.

"We don't like to recommend him to a family because he just might nip a youngster again although he's not a vicious dog."

Just when Butch must have felt the death-sentence coming closer and closer the shadow of Topper crossed his path.

Topper's owner, Frank Dailey of Hamilton, arrived and was formally introduced to big Butch.

Mr. Dailey owned some elephants and he had just lost his dog who used to stay with them. It seems elephants and dogs have a great affection for one another.

Butch's plight was explained to Mr. Dailey who decided he would need a dog to go south to Florida with him this winter to stay with the elephants. He wanted Butch.

The story ends on a very cheerful note.

It's true, the pony Topper just doesn't love dogs and probably doesn't like them at all.

But as for Butch, he might be just the dog some lonesome elephant is looking for.

In any case, he'll be spending the winter in the south.

How many humans can beat that?
