In a rare procedure for King City Village trustees, the regular September 28 meeting adjourned into closed session to hear local library board member Kenneth Chesney make a bid for a township li-

Trustee Donald Findlay suggested a few minutes' wait until the delegation was complete.

With the arrival of Township Councillor William Curran, chairman of King's centennial committee, the hourlong regular meeting dissolved and half a dozen ratepayers and reporters left.

Asked for comment next day, Mr. Findlay told reporters the library board recommended conversion of the police village library to a township library set-

He explained that when Village Chairman John Mann returned from a business trip, trustees would make a study of the request. He noted grants and costs of both types of library operation. had been discussed at the closed session.

Mr. Chesney released for publication the same information presented to trus-

The board's recommendation was based on probable increased grants to a township library, he said. If it's found there's no difference in financial structure, there would be no point in changing over, he told "The Liberal".

Here is the text of the board's state-

"Several months ago, King City Library Board, upon learning of the proposed expropriation of the library property by the railroad, began thinking in terms of relocation.

"It was at this time that thought was given to the possibility of receiving financial assistance through the centennial grants program and initial application for such assistance was made.

"After considerable thought and discussion, the board is of the opinion that it would be to the advantage of the citizens of King City, as well as local King Township residents, if the King City Library was to be changed from a police village library to a township library.

"This opinion is primarily based upon the finances which would be available for a new library; as outlined below. As either a village or township library,

$8,000 is available based on land prop-

As a township library, according to information from the director of public libraries based on costs and numbers using the library, $7,000 would be available as a grant compared to $2,000 as a village library.

A centennial grant of $15,000 might be available under the township board status but this would be only $6,000 maximum if applied for as a village pro-

A Centennial Project?

This brings a total of $30,000 available if a library was put under township status and only $16,000 as a village.

"The library would, of course, be built in the Police Village of King and would, for all intents and purposes be a King City Library.

"The only changes, from its present status, aside from financial betterment, would be in the name; and, of course, the board would be composed of the reeve of the township; three members appointed by township council; three members appointed by the public school board or board of education: two members appointed by the separate school board, as compared to that of a police village, which is composed of chairman of the board of trustees, two members appointed by the police village, two members appointed by the public school board and two members appointed by the separate school board.

"In view of the fact Township Solicitor of King City Women's Institute, J. D. Lucas recently advised council they should have word regarding the re-loca- don, first secretary-treasurer; tion of the railroad right-of-way within a very few days; (indicating the railroad is preparing to proceed with the grade separation) and the final applica- dent Mrs. Austin Rumble tion for centennial grants must be sent to the party held at Summit in by approximately November 9 and with the aforementioned facts and figures in mind; we, the board of King City Public Library request and recommend trustees take the necessary steps to have King City Public Library be made a King Township Public Library, at their earliest convenience."

No Hearing Date On Incorporation Set By OMB

King City Trustees by press time this week had yet to hear from the Ontario Municipal Board on a hearing date for trustees' late August application for incorporation on present village boundaries.

In the meantime trustees said they have submitted a 1955 map indicating the village's approximately 375 acres to the OMB.

Trustee Donald Findlay told "The Liberal", trustees on September 17 sent the OMB general reasons. prepared by legal counsel, why incorporation was being sought.

A September 26 letter from the board requested a description of present boundaries.

Mr. Finlay sand trustees were awaiting 1964 figures in the current report prepared by chartered accountants Glendinning, Campbell, Jarrett and Dever. A Proctor and Redfern planning report is still in preparation.
