Extra Classrooms Opened For Night School Overflow

School Board reports an encouraging increase in interest in their night school program this year with registration at both Bayview and Thornhill Secondary schools up almost 50% over last

Over 800 people are enrolled at Bayview and D. K. Frise, co-principal along with J. Munro-Cape, reports 38 classes of night school students, while there are only 36 during the day. To handle the overflow, one class in advanced sewing has had to be opened at Richmond Hill High School. School board officials are particularly pleased with the response to the academic courses in which 112 students have been registered, their average age being about 30 according to Mr. Frise. There are two classes of grade 13 English and history and two of grade 12 algebra, chemistry and English. The algebra class is full, but the others could accommodate a few more.

A unique experiment is being tried this year with a combination of mathematics and English grade 10 course. Previously, anyone wishing this teaching had to go

York Central District High who hasn't completed grade ed and one or more may be teacher has been hired who 10 can enter the course. and mature students without grade 9 will be admitted. It is planned to give those students desirous of completing high school special attention all the way through to help them achieve this ambition. A few more people could also be accommodated in this class.

All the six teachers who are giving the academic courses are fully-qualified, practising teachers and three are department heads in the York Central system

Commercial classes in Bayview are also very popular and the classes in bookkeeping and business machines are both full. There are also large classes in typing and shorthand at both beginners and advanced levels, Altogether, 150 people are enrolled in the commercial school.

Home economics, a perennially popular course, has attracted 150 students in beginners and advanced dressmaking and millinery

In the technical courses. there is an overflow in the electricity-electronics class and in beginning welding. Auto mechanics, mechanical drafting and machine shop classes are not so well fill-closed if no additional registrations are received. A total of 85 people are enrolled in the technical courses.

Under the heading "special courses" some 350 people are enrolled enjoying such diverse arts as bridge, conversational French, interior decorating, oil painting, English and citizenship and the new mathematics.

The course in the new mathematics is being offered so that mothers and fathers will be able to follow the time-honoured custom of helping Junior with his homework. Many parents are confused with the new mathematical concepts and vocabulary which their children are bringing home from school and this class will help them maintain their self-respect and understand what the youngsters are talking about. More people could be accommodated in Course director is Denis Middleton, principal of Pleasantville Public School. Percy Sheardown, whom Charles Goren calls the world's number five bridge player, is taking care of the bridge enthusiasts. Such has been the response to this course that a second expert studied under the Sayer bro-will conduct a class for beginners. Applications are invited for this class.

A husband and wife team, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Everard, are conducting the conversational French class with Mrs. Everard taking care of the fundamentals and Mr. Everard filling in with the idiomatic parts.

The interior decorating class is also a big one and is being taken care of by Bill Thoms of the Bayview staff. He will bring in various consultants during the

A similar course is being offered at Thornhill on Monday and Wednesday nights and will feature a series of specialists, Mrs. Elaine Brown of Simpson's interior decorating staff. Miss G. Bitterworth, consultant for Verdin Industries, Alan Campaign, the home planning editor of Chatelaine and several others.

Oil painting both for beginners and advanced students is a popular subject at both high schools and classes are being conducted by Jack Siegel. Mr. Siegel is a graduate of the University of Toronto and won a scholarship in New York where he thers. He has also studied under John Alpen and Charles Comfort, head of the National Gallery in Ottawa., He has exhibited in leading galleries of the U.S. and Canada. His Tuesday and Thursday classes at Bayview are pretty well filled, but there is still room in the Monday or Wednesday classes at Thornhill.

Public speaking is also being taught at both schools, at Bayview by James Jackson of Richmond Hill, who has just had a novel published and is attached to the RCAF staff college in Toronto. At Thornhill, the course will be given by a professional firm, C. W. Wright & Associates. The Thornhill course, which started October 21 will consist of a series of 12 lectures and there is room for more students at both schools.

And at Thornhill, Al Smith the golf pro at Victoria Square Golf Club and former assistant pro at Uplands is conducting a course in golf for beginners. Another 10 could be accommodated in this class and Mr Smith promises to arrange a tournament with a similar class he is conducting in Leaside.

The conversational French

iastic but small and is being conducted by Madame K. Neely. Madame Neely has been teaching oral French to the children at Thornhill Public School in after school classes for the past year.

Only one academic course is in operation at Thornhill, grade 13 French which is being instructed by J. A. Turko. head of the French department. This class is quite small and could accommodate a number of additional students

An extremely popular course at Thornhill is the new "Hostess Hints" series being given by a former "Betty Bright" for the Consumers Gas Co. Mr. Duniochelle of the Toronto School of Floral Design in this series.
