Curling Club

The second production in the Curtain Club's "season of comedy" is a big switch from the opening play—"Pygmalion"—George Bernard Shaw's masterpiece. For their second presentation the Curtain Club has jumped from the London of 1910 to New York, 1964, and has picked Neil Simon's "Come Blow Your Horn" to keep their audience laughing.

This fast-paced farce played for over two years in New York and was one of the biggest hits of the 1962-63 Broadway season. Mr. Simon is currently represented on Broadway (and at the Royal Alexandra) with the comedy "Barefoot in the Park".

As the last traces of Prof. Higgins' drawing room were taken down from the stage the actors for "Come Blow Your Horn" took over and began rehearsals. The club has imported director Tony Miller, from Aurora to stage this sparkling comedy and already the laugh lines are being carefully pointed as the actors begin to pick up the pace and first night gets closer.

"Come Blow Your Horn" will play from November 18-21 and November 25-28. Tickets can be ordered by phone: 884-3861 and 884-2957.

Featured in the cast are Ann and Jerry Diakiv, a Richmond Hill husband-and-wife team (both were last seen together in the club's production of "Right You Are If You Think You Are" while Jerry was in last year's "The Little Hut"); Kingsley Owen (who played in the production of "The Country Wife"); Joseph Rabinowitch (local lawyer, who has been featured in many club productions and includes appearances at Toronto's Crest Theatre among his many credits); Esther Postlethwaite (last seen in "The Country Wife") and Helene Knight, a new member from Markham.
