Urges Schools To Teach Individual Human Worth

Speaking to 700 teachers and other educators last week in Toronto, George A. Noble, assistant superintendent of public schools for North York, said the amount of frustration and lack of identity which thousands of people experience should be an indication to all of us of the perils of the automated world our children will inhabit.

"I believe that a deliberate conscious effort must be made in our public education to promote the notion of the worth of the individual human being," continued the speaker who lived in Richmond Hill when he was a member of the Department of Education's inspection staff in this county. He was speaking at a conference of the Ontario Council for Childhood Education. Conference discussions centred around Different Ways of Learning for Different Kinds of Children.

It will make a great deal of difference to our children "as they enter that different world of tomorrow if we fail to provide them with an education which will help them be flexible, adaptable and self-sufficient," Mr. Noble said.

"We can no longer have our best students aim for the top and our poor ones remain at the bottom. No one can predict where the top will be. And there will be no room at the bottom because there will be no bottom in a society which will have eroded, through the process of automation, the unskilled base on which the economy depended for so long.

"Every child, regardless of intellectual endowment, will have to develop his capacity to think, to communicate, to relate, to perceive, to judge, and above all, to set and to follow personal goals.

"Every child must be educated to change, for leisure for a lifetime of learning, not just for 13 years."

Mr. Noble said he could not describe the ideal school organization of the future in administrative terms because "I doubt that one exists yet." But in terms of the needs of children he listed the following 12 components of individual growth and development which education must provide:

- Assurance—that he is a worthy individual;
- Opportunity—to be the kind of person that he really is;
- Stimulation—in order that he may grow;
- Assistance—to determine the direction and limitations to which his growth must be subject;
- Awareness—of the worth and need of other individuals;
- Confidence—in the social virtues of honesty, beauty, fair play, and in such spiritual values as emerge from the notion of the worth of the individual;
- Exposure to decision-making with as many of its attendant consequences as possible;
- Involvement—in physical and social situations which give rise to a sense of purpose, of commitment;
- Choice—of action, the basis of any developing sense of responsibility, both personal and social;
- Development—of his capacity for invention, for creativity;
- Transformation—from a dependent to an independent knowledgeable person;
- Expansion—of those skills, that knowledge, and those attitudes which will fit him to gain acceptance in the adult world as well as live fully in his present world.

Plan Series Of Film And Discussion Nights At Downsview Library

"Modern Environment—Order or Chaos?" will be the subject of a series of film and discussion evenings to be held at the Downsview branch of the North York Public Library on November 12, 19 and 26.

On November 12, two films will be shown "Town Planning a Master Plan", showing how town planning can direct the replanning of a city grown at random, and "The City", a survey of the problem of planning community life in America.

"Suburban Living—Six Solutions" will be shown November 19. It compares solutions of problems of suburban living in London, Marseilles, Rotterdam, Stockholm and Toronto.

On November 26, two more films will be shown: "Cars in Your Life", a humorous film about the great North American itch for a place on the road; and "Traffic in Towns" showing ways in which Britain wants to control this problem.

Industrial Complex Has Unique Features

People living in the area of the Walter Scott School and people travelling along Markham Road have been greatly interested in recent weeks.

John A. Griffin Construction Ltd. announces this week with pleasure that Richmond Hill's first industrial plaza is now nearing completion, offering industry something new in factory space.

Units are available from 3,000 square feet up with truck level loading, 12 foot ceilings in the factory area and offices completely finished ready to be occupied.

A special feature of the building is that, from a central office, telephone answering and stenographic services are available. The small industrialist may maintain prestige and save money by using this unique service.

Outside maintenance, snow clearance, etc., will be provided so that tenants may always present a clean operation to the public and the property will be an asset to the surrounding neighborhood.

This industrial plaza has a prestige location on the north side of Markham Road just east of Newkirk, ideally situated on a good four lane highway with all facilities available.

Full information and rental rates are available through T. Murphy Real Estate Broker.

Parks Supervisor Died November 1

What's your stand on registering life insurance policies to claim certain income tax deductions?

Mr. Campbell
 If it's possible, I'm all for it!

Interviewer
 You'll be pleased to know you may register any Mutual Life policy, except Term, under the Income Tax Act. Subject to certain limitations, the savings portion of your premium can then be deducted from your taxable income each year.

Mr. Campbell
 It seems to me that everybody should know about this!

Interviewer
 You're right! Particularly people who are building a pension for themselves. Even people now contributing to a company pension plan may qualify for further tax relief.

Mr. Campbell
 Look, I'd like to check into this before I file my 1964 return. Where can I get complete information?

Interviewer
 Just call your nearest Mutual Life representative.
