A New Renaissance

Teachers Urged To Accept Change

"We are in a new renaissance" stated David Cleo, assistant superintendent of curriculum of the Ontario Department of Education, addressing nearly 60 teachers of TSA No. 1, Markham, during their professional development day, November 18.

Mr. Cleo drew a parallel between the earlier renaissance and today. An era of sea exploration was equated with air exploration of today; the development of the printing press and its profound effect on humanity with the impact of radio, TV and computers; the flowering of renaissance art and the introduction of perspective with the new abstract art of today; the early beginnings of science with the present tremendous development of science which sees 80% of the great scientists of the world alive today. The development of gunpowder with the development of atomic power.

A look into the future is a puzzling one, he said, and we cannot conceive what type of society the children of today will be living in. We are now living in an age of fear, an age of new knowledge, an age of exploding population and an age in which the life span is expanding.

"The child of this shrinking world will not be a citizen of the community but of the world," he stated and asked "What are we going to do to prepare him for this?"

The first thing was to accept the changes and accommodate ourselves to them, Mr. Cleo stressed, noting that teachers are often said to be the slowest to change.

Instead of a catalogue of facts to be memorized, children should be given problems in which they can do maximum thinking. There should be a "flow-over" from compartments so that the children acquire an interrelated body of knowledge.

In the curriculum department, Mr. Cleo said they were contemplating a complete re-orientation of grades 1 to 6 to see what are the aims and objects of teaching children of this age; looking into the teaching of French to see whether it should be started in kindergarten or kept in the senior grades; deciding what part religious education should play in the public schools in the future; discussing what new subjects should be included in the curriculum, such as geology, theatre arts, home economics, etc.; assessing the place of team teaching, ungraded schools and whether or not teachers should be given more detailed courses from which to teach.

Mr. Cleo spoke to the teachers following the dinner which was served at noon at Thornhill United Church, and which was provided for the teachers by the board of TSA No. 1.

At the morning sessions, held in Henderson Avenue Public School, the teachers had taken part in discussion groups led by members of their own system and by five educationists presently members of the advisory committee of the curriculum branch. These were J. K. Crossley, public school inspector from Welland, Miss D. H. M. Dunn, Ottawa separate school inspector, N. B. Massey of London Teachers' College, Miss P. A. Moore of Peterboro

Mr. Hallman pointed out that we are living along the growing edge of an educational frontier. Goals should be re-assessed on a continuing basis. "If you learn something new, try it. If it works it will be kept. If it doesn't, we'll bury it. If you don't have the thrill of discovery, you are professionally dead," he insisted.

Following Mr. Hallman's address the teachers broke up into three discussion groups, one on printing and writing in the primary division; one on the reading program in the junior division and one on guidance in the intermediate division.

M. R. Wilson of the staff of Toronto Teachers' College led the discussion on reading in the junior division and deplored the almost complete absence of good literature in readers up to the grade 6 level. He could only find three samples of stimulating, imaginative reading in the grade 6 reader, he said, although the grade 7 and 8 readers were much better.

He urged the teachers to draw the attention of their pupils to well-written passages and help them appreciate good writing. Only if they are exposed to good writing, he said, would this carry over into their own composition.

At the conclusion of the discussion groups, the teachers met in the auditorium to discuss business relating to the Ontario Teachers' Federation.

You wouldn't wear your summer clothes when the weather gets near freezin'... But have you changed your drivin' style to suit the changin' season?

Winter driving is dangerous :: visibility is low during winter storms; stopping takes longer; and early darkness means more driving after dark.
TO AVOID WINTER ACCIDENTS: slow down... keep your windshield free of ice and snow... follow at a safe distance and remember to leave one window open a little at all times. If you have to stop in a hurry, pump your brakes, don't jam them and put your car into a skid. (Power brakes need gentle pumping.)
