

100 Centennial Plans Approved In Ontario

To date, Ontario has received 442 centennial grant applications and 100 of these have been approved. Minister of Tourism and Information for Ontario James Auld announced recently.

The federal government — a joint partner in every approved grant — has given the green light to 64, for a total of $1,740,862.

Mr. Auld who is chairman of the joint federal-provincial centennial committee, termed many of the projects inspired and rejected the suggestion that most of them were dull and unimaginative.

He cited Hamilton's plan to restore a pre-Confederation mansion and St. Catharines development of a garden park on the abandoned land of the first and second Welland Canals.

17 Subdivisions Stalled N. York

C. D. Milani, well-known Willowdale land developer, charges that North York's record-breaking building boom has ground to a standstill and unless it starts again soon investors may find new places for their capital. He claims 17 residential subdivisions are awaiting final approval which may not come from the new council until the end of January adding up to a delay of 90 days. "This is too long," Mr. Milani states.

"That work is just not being done and there is a staggering backlog of work piling up," Mr. Milani claims. "The township may suffer irreparably because it is a known fact that capital will not wait while a new council establishes new procedures or policies."

Reeve James Service and new board of control will take over township affairs on January 1. Mr. Service defeated Reeve Norman Goodhead in December 7 election.

CBC Xmas Eve Program Features Stouffville

CBC crews have been in the village several times in the last couple of weeks, preparing portions of the program, while some of the telecast will be done "live" on Christmas Eve.

Stouffville was selected as an example of a small town on the day before Christmas.

Ramsay Weddell Head North York Plowmen

Ramsay Weddell was elected president of the North York Plowman's Association at the annual meeting held following a banquet at Sharon Hall recently.

Agricultural Representative A. A. Wall conducted the election of the 1965 executive. These included Grant Wells, first vice-president, Leonard Wellman, second vice-president; Mrs. Sheldon Walker, secretary, Fred Timbers, treasurer, Ed Logan and L. J. Harper were named honorary president and honorary secretary respectively.
