

Vaughan Council Split

 ment with this, two of this year's new councillors Dalton McArthur and Warren Bryce wanted further specific information about plans and costs.

In answer to a question by Councillor McArthur, Mr. Roedde advised that if the estimated cost of a main library and two branches, as proposed last year and amounting to approximately $106,000, were spent within the next three years, the township would receive a grant of about $20,000 from the province over and above the centennial grants. The grants would be based on 25% of operating costs, up to $2.00 per capita.

Mr. Roedde noted also that if instead of building libraries, library space were rented, the rent would be an operating cost and grant would be paid on it. To a question from Lorne Wells, chairman of the Vaughan Township Public School Board, Mr. Roedde answered that space could be rented from a school board and this rent would be eligible for a grant, although such a situation was unusual.

Reeve Rutherford read to the meeting a letter which had been handed to him before the meeting began. From the Kleinburg Library Association, it made formal request for the establishment of a township library board, in accordance with a meeting of the association held March 12. The meeting also gave authority for the Kleinburg library to turn its assets over to a township library board and advised that they would maintain a library service until such time as a township service is in operation.

Councillor McArthur incurred the wrath of members of the Kleinburg Board when he commended them for their decision and noted that previously they had wanted to turn over their assets only under certain conditions which would benefit the people of Kleinburg. Daniel Thomas of Kleinburg hotly denied this. "At no time have we put Kleinburg ahead of anywhere else," he stated. "It is on record that we desired to form a centennial library for the whole township."

Councillor Bryce wanted more specific figures and wondered how the $106,000 had been arrived at. He was advised that this was based on $20,000 for each of two small branches at Kleinburg and Richvale and $65,000 for a central library in Maple.

"What can you provide for $20,000," Councillor Bryce enquired. "You can't pick figures out of the air." Deputy-reeve Williams advised that these figures had been suggested last year by Mr. Roedde. While Mr. Roedde felt it was uneconomical to build a library of less than 4,000 square feet, smaller ones could be built if the type of construction and the site would permit future expansion.

Mr. Wells advised that the figures had been arrived at last August in a meeting which representatives of both the public and high school boards attended. High schools were being built at around $15 to $16 per square foot and public schools at $14 to $15, so they had felt a library could be built for approximately $15 per square foot.

Reeve Rutherford explained that it had been felt that a half mill levy for the next three years would build the libraries, along with the grants, and that operating costs could be met with a half mill levy from then on. A member of the audience suggested building the libraries with a debenture issue, but it was noted that there would be no centennial grant on a debenture issue. Mr. Rutherford also advised that the township would prefer not to issue any more debentures at present.

Councillor Kaiser objected that they were only looking at the library service in terms of cost and not in terms of the value it would be to the people of the township. "This will serve people from the age of five to 70," he said and asked that members of council be polled on the setting up of a library board.

It was suggested that he change this to a motion, which he did. Vote on the motion was tied with Williams and Kaiser in favor and McArthur and Bryce opposed.

Reeve Rutherford signified that he would have to break the tie by voting in favor as he was still of the same opinion as last year, but no formal statement of the motion having carried was made, and discussion continued.

Councillor McArthur was strongly of the opinion that the possibility of a central library, not necessarily in Maple and a bookmobile service for the rest of the township should be investigated.

Reeve Rutherford objected that this had gone into last year and that a bookmobile was the most expensive way of distributing books. It would also require a qualified librarian, he said, and one who could drive a truck.

Mr. Thomas pointed out too that a bookmobile would mean the loss of other benefits of a library, such as a meeting place, story hour for children, etc.

Mr. Roedde advised that a bookmobile could cost anywhere between ten and twenty thousand dollars and operating costs would depend on how many people were involved in servicing it. There were many technical difficulties, he said and bookmobiles were rarely used in municipalities of less than 30,000 people. He also wondered what would be done with the two libraries at Kleinburg and Maple if a bookmobile were operated.

Samuel Neill, librarian at Langstaff Secondary School enquired whether council would not still have final say in costs even if a library board were set up. He was advised that this was true, that a library board could present a budget but council did not have to accept it. A library board and council would have to approve anything over that amount.

Reeve Rutherford thanked Mr. Roedde and the ratepayers for attending the meeting. The question would be discussed again in committee he said and a final decision announced at next week's council meeting.

Magistrate Dismisses Fraud Charge Against Toronto Man

Mrs. Eif gave similar testimony, and said, however, she was happy with the merchandise when she finally received it. She also said Mr. Loevenmark the balance of her bill, following her court appearance. Mr. Brock said he laid the charge against the accused, December 9, after several times failing to get a satisfactory answer from him regarding the delivery of the material. Mr. Malcolmson said the Crown hadn't shown any positive acts with regard to the matter.

"Two of the three witnesses were so little upset, they didn't bother to go to the accused to get their money," Mr. Malcolmson said.

He said the "mere delay" in doing work didn't constitute fraud. Magistrate Hollinrake felt there was some doubt under the section in which the charge had been laid, and the accused was put on the stand.

Mr. Loevenmark, a specialist in theatre advertising for many years, until television caused a noticeable decline in his business, told the court he had designed the telephone sticker and had it copyrighted in 1963.

He then described his attempt to start production of the stickers after contracting for them with the three complainants.

Through a series of invoices and photostatic copies, he traced the various steps in his work, which he attempted to launch in the fall. However, due to the Toronto newspapers printers strike, and through the illness of one of his original printers, he found printing places at a minimum and he was constantly running into delays.

Throughout his testimony he produced dated exhibits to show the work he had done on the contracts and how it had been cut off at various stages of production.

He said if it hadn't been for the delays brought about by the lack of printers, he would have been able to fulfill the contracts in time.

Magistrate Hollinrake said he didn't think there had been any deceit practiced by the accused. It had been more of a case of over-enthusiasm on his part to deliver the goods in time.
