Magistrate Hints At Stern Treatment

A visiting magistrate told an Oak Ridges youth that he was "tempted to wish there were some sort of violence" that could be used on the accused in return for his actions in beating up a Richmond Hill boy last month.

John D. Ord, of Georgetown, who was filling in for holidaying Magistrate Russell Pearce, made his remarks Thursday of last week in Magistrate's Court after convicting Thomas Stevenson, 16, of assault occasioning bodily harm.

Stevenson was also convicted of consuming liquor while under age, but another charge of assaulting a police constable, was withdrawn.

A husky six-footer, Stevenson had pleaded not guilty to punching 16-year-old Fred Wilkinson, 184 Laverock Avenue, in the face a couple of times with his fist. Wilkinson required three stitches above his left eye following the attack.

"Where unprovoked violence is used . . . there must be some substantial punishment," Mr. Ord said. "This can't be tolerated in a civilized society".

He said, however, that he would never sentence a youth to jail without giving him the benefit of a presentence report. It was possible the report could prevent a jail term, too.

Defence Counsel John Lawlor had asked that his client be allowed to continue in school after Crown Attorney Arleigh Armstrong had asked for a jail sentence.

Mr. Armstrong said there had been some "viciousness" about the attack. "Call it what you like — exuberance of youth — there was no provocation. He was looking for trouble."

Wilkinson and three other witnesses, Michael McMasters 16, 234 Montiel Road; Robert Ellis 16, 122 Mill Street, and Steven Brook, 222 Altmira Road, all testified that Stevenson had selected Wilkinson as his particular target when the four youths were walking down Yonge Street at Centre Street about 12.40 am, September 4.

Stevenson, who was with several other boys, slapped or touched each youth on the cheek as they walked by and then grabbed Wilkinson, the last one in the group, the witnesses said.

Wilkinson said the accused then struck him in the eye and the cheek and pushed him onto the road with the pronouncement: "There's the highway."

Two defence witnesses, Terrence Potts, Oak Ridges and Ron Barraclough, North York, both said they were with Stevenson on the night in question, but that he hadn't struck the complainant.

They said Stevenson had warned Wilkinson after the latter had bumped into him.

Said Magistrate Ord after remanding the accused out of custody for two weeks: "If you ever behaved yourself before, behave in the next two weeks."
