Hill Resident Sees Lancashire Show

Mrs. Jean McAlister, Laverock Avenue, Richmond Hill (left) returned recently from a holiday spent with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. T. McAlister (right) at Birkdale, Lancashire.

The party was shown at the world famous flower show at Southport, Lancashire, admiring the gold medal-winning rock garden. This was the third time Mrs. McAlister had visited the Southport Flower Show.

Public School Teachers Get Lively Pep Talk At Seminar

The middle of the road is not for the teaching profession, Dr. T. W. H. Martin of the Programmed Learning Division of W. J. Gage Co., Scarborough, told Richmond Hill public school teachers last week. Instead, teachers must communicate clearly and decisively so that they will produce people, "who are not the conformists that have turned this world into the mess it is today."

Dr. Martin, formerly superintendent of public schools for Toronto, was the guest speaker at the local public schools professional development day held at Crosby Heights School, October 1.

That was wrong, he said. "Diversed from a natural experience, these things are as transitory as the French prime ministers used to be."

"The main defect in a language program is the lack of meaning," Dr. Martin said. "What do we mean by meaning? The word is a symbol of an idea, an idea is the residue of experience, what the mind has to work with after an experience is over."

"Meaning is turning experience into language."

"Dr. Martin said it was important to have a 'unity of the language arts.' The tendency was to separate the English program into reading, writing and composition, although they were really a unit expressed in different ways, but with the same symbols."

The speaker said that sound was the basic symbol, while the others were extensions. "They should all be used together as a basic idea stemming from one experience. When one is lacking, you lose some of the meaning."

The teacher must recognize his professional responsibility "of arranging experience." No longer could he give a pupil an assignment of 30 lines on what he did last Friday, he must adjust to what he recognized as the child's main interest.

Quoting from writer Archibald McLetch, he said "Creative writing can't be taught, but the graces of writing can," and exhorted his listeners to "help them apply those graces to thought." At the same time they should not worry over capital and punctuation.

He also advised the teachers not to be too analytical in their teaching of poetry, but to consider it in the manner of Lawrence Durrell, as something to be "taken from time to time and allowed to dissolve in the mind."

Another way in which teachers could help contribute to the development of their pupils was to make use of the movable furniture in the classrooms, which was put there so that a social environment could be created if the teachers wanted it.

Teachers would have to be less "wishy washy," too, and not try to carry out every psychological "tid bit" they learned. It was impossible to always weigh every side of the question.

Get the children involved, communicate with them in a language they can understand and don't be afraid to take liberties. That took nerve, but it was something the board couldn't give to them.

"You will get a new and enriching profession if you declare and commit yourself to this new way of looking at education," Dr. Martin said.

Others speakers were Public School Superintendent Gordon McIntyre, who introduced Dr. Martin; School Board Chairman Walter Hutchinson; and Rev. J. N. Hepburn, Richmond Hill Presbyterian Church, R. L. Newman, principal of MacKillop School, was chairman.

Following Dr. Martin's address, the teachers met in groups to discuss problems relating to their respective grades. Leading the groups were Frances Poleschuk, chief reading consultant, North York Board of Education; Phyllis Todds, principal, reading clinic; Toronto Board of Education; Mrs. Jean Trotter, curriculum consultant, Forest Hill Board of Education; M. Wilson, master, Toronto Teacher's College; Robert MacDonald, master teacher, York Central District High Schools; Misses D. H. Dunn and Moore, curriculum division, Department of Education.

Curtain Club Opens 12th Season

(Continued from Page 1) low but no self-respecting suburbanite would be caught dead in such a setting. And why, when the play called for a book to be produced, was a bookshelf merely painted on the wall of the set with a slot for the one real book? And surely, when windows were necessary for the action, it could have been possible to frame them or drape them in such a way that they looked like windows and not merely holes cut in the wall. The furnishings here too were nothing short of ghastly — and no apparent reason.

A closer attention to costumeing would also help. Whoever turned Peter Purvis' pantouffles up a good eight inches did him an extreme disservice.

This play was directed by Mary Neill, her first appearance in this capacity with the Curtain Club although she has had several years' experience in both acting and directing with groups in Parry Sound.

Although most of the audience kept waiting for some of the dialogue in "A Resounding Tinkle" to make sense, it never did, which made Tony Miller's carrying it off with such aplomb a real achievement. All of his completely ridiculous statements and comments were uttered with not only complete seriousness but as if they were carefully considered and of the gravest importance.

Mr. Miller was well matched by Iris Stringer who was on stage throughout the entire production and appeared suitably mad. The only thing that marred her performance was stumbling over one or two lines. Audrey Rowlands was also amusing as Uncle Ted while John Tidswell gave out with the mellow, resounding tones of a bishop, in a spoof of a religious service.

John McArthur of Richmond Hill did a good job of directing here, the first time he has appeared in this role with the Curtain Club. Mr. McArthur appeared as an actor in the club's Dominion Drama Festival entry last year "Diary of a Scoundrel".

Both plays were marred however, by inexplicably bad sets. The back wall of the set for "The Browning Version" had a noticeable stain and the furnishings were quite unrelated and unnecessarily shabby, with the exception of a glaringly new and bright chintz covered sofa. It all appeared a dreadful hodge-podge and quite distracting.

Even more distracting was the set for "A Resounding Tinkle". The play is a satire on the inanities of life and conversation in a suburban bungalow.

We are pleased to announce that K. M. Cunningham, 406 Allgood Drive, Richmond Hill and D. G. Forest, 22 Gosling Road, Maple, were the winners of our lucky draw; and thank all who participated in our grand opening and lucky draw knowing the winners will receive good service from their watches.

We were indeed honored to have Reeve A. H. Rutherford of Vaughan Township draw the lucky names, and found the reeve a very friendly man with a warm and sincere feeling for the growth of Vaughan Township. It is obvious to us why he has been reeve of our township for five years.

While we were talking to the reeve he let slip the fact that he has been married for 40 years and a resident of the township to which he gives leadership for about 42 years.

We offer Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford congratulations on their anniversary with the hope that the Lord will spare them for many more years of fruitful work and also bless them with good health and prosperity.

We also appreciate greatly the many new friends we have made, and wish to become a part of life in the Maple area and in tune with its activities.

In selling and servicing VW we feel we have the car that not only answers your motoring needs but is the best all-round car in which to invest your working dollars.
