

Liberal candidate John Addison, right, and Newmarket Mayor Albert Kent are shown greeting the CN's No. 641 at Newmarket Monday morning, cause of great election controversy.

Liberal workers termed the train the beginning of commuter train service to the Newmarket area, while PC candidate Donald Martyn quoted CN officials to the effect that the train was a regular run between Toronto and North Bay.

Commuter Controversy

A controversy which has been smoldering throughout the federal election campaign in York North burst into prominence this week with contradictory press releases issued by Liberal Candidate John Addison and Progressive Conservative Donald Martyn.

Involved is a possible rail commuter service to serve York County residents, something which Addison has been attempting to foster since 1963 when he conducted a mail survey of York North residents. The survey was said to have indicated considerable support for a commuter service.

In a press release dated November 1, Donald Stephenson, Mr. Addison's publicity manager stated that "The CNR instituted a fast rail-liner service today from Toronto through Newmarket to North Bay. The new service replaces previous schedules and included commuter-style coaches which are being tested prior to commencement with the train, Addison canvassers began a door-to-door campaign in Newmarket, intimating to householder that a commuter service was now an established fact.

Mr. Martyn denied that this is so. He quoted Edward Ingram, information officer of the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Transit Study at Queen's Park who stated that the train met by Mr. Addison was the normal CNR service which operates between Toronto and North Bay, stopping at Newmarket northbound at 10:22 am and southbound at 9:29 pm. The only difference, he said, was that the railway had changed its equipment from conventional locomotive-hauled cars to self-propelled diesel cars used in dayliner services.

Mr. Ingram further stated that the provincial government has undertaken to start a rail commuter service along the Lakeshore but that there are no plans at present to start a similar service in communities north of Toronto such as Richmond Hill and Newmarket.

Frank Quinlan, public relations officer for the CNR in Toronto was also quoted as denying that the CNR had instituted a fast rail-liner service as announced by Mr. Addison.

In the Toronto press, D. V. Gonder, the railway's central regional vice-president was quoted Wednesday morning as saying "There was no test run of any kind made in that area to my knowledge. The train that pulled into Newmarket at that time was on a regular run to North Bay."

In the same article, Mr. Stephenson was quoted as blaming Liberal workers in the Newmarket area who "led me down the garden path" as well as the CNR who, he said, "led me to believe this was to be a test run".

Mr. Martyn termed the whole thing "another example of the Liberal opposition's use of misleading advertising and half-truths to woo the voters of York North."

3 Police Commissions Appointed, Same Judge To Serve Three Boards

(Continued from Page 1) will not receive direction from the boards with respect to prosecutions, etc. Chiefs however will be directly responsible to the boards instead of the municipal councils as formerly.

The police commissioners are quite independent of municipal councils although they will submit a budget to council each year but are not required to otherwise report to council.

The Police Act requires that police commissioners meet at least four times per year and that they be paid a minimum of $100 yearly. Remuneration can go as high as the $5,000 per annum paid to commissioners of the Toronto board, although many small boards pay only the minimum. Remuneration of commissioners is set by local municipal councils, based on the frequency with which the boards are expected to meet, possibly six times a year locally.

The three local boards were made necessary by legislation at the last session of the Ontario Legislature which required that such boards be set up in all municipalities with over 15,000 population. Previously, the Act had required that all cities (which must have a population of at least 15,000) should have boards of police commissioners. However, such has been the growth in township populations recently that some have between 80 and 90 thousand people and many are in the 25 to 30 thousand population range.

The Ontario Board of Police Commissioners which appointed the three new local boards, accepted right across the province and several municipalities not required to have such boards have passed by-laws requesting them. This is being encouraged and no such request has been turned down. The boards are forced to relieve police departments of any possible political pressure and also provide more continuity than is the case when police departments are run by elected officials.

The Ontario Board appointed the same judge to the Richmond Hill, Vaughan and Markham Boards as it was felt that this would improve the possibility of co-operation between the three police departments. The same magistrate was appointed to the two township boards as it was felt they would have many similar problems, while it was felt that it would be preferable to have someone who lives in the community of Richmond Hill and is intimately acquainted with its problems, appointed to that board.

Chairman, William Lazenby, Eric Handbury, and Mayor Broadhurst.

Councillor Lois Hancey said it was "most unfortunate that the committee has been taken over by the commission. There has been no difficulty in this town and the police committee has operated very efficiently."

Mrs. Hancey felt also that it was not a satisfactory system whereby magistrates and judges control the police actions.

"They are part of the law themselves," she said, "and I feel the Attorney General should look into this aspect of the situation. I think there should be an investigation."

Reeve Donald Plaxton noted that some feel the "establishment of a police commission is a very desirable aspect but there are also some who do not think it very desirable."

Mr. Plaxton noted that the setting up of a commission meant that much more for the elected representatives to finance.

"But I do think we are fortunate in having two members from Richmond Hill."

Mr. Perkins noted the town was "fortunate in having Magistrate Butler represent it."

Markham Township Council expressed some concern toward the financial end of the new setup.

Said Deputy-reeve Stewart Rumble: "I think it's time the province started paying a little more toward it if it's going to have so much to say about it!"

Said Clerk H. C. T. Crisp: "The Act requires council to set pay. The commission submits its annual request to council, the same as a school board."

"What if we threw it out?" asked Mr. Rumble.

"I doubt if we could do that," said Mr. Crisp.

Poor Progress On School Additions

Richmond Hill's new police commission set-up has been described as just another step toward a "police state" by Deputy-reeve Floyd Perkins.

This was one of the reactions Monday night as councillors accepted the commission's formation in decidedly luke-warm fashion.

"I'm sorry to see the town's authority taken away from local representatives and given over to magistrate's justice," said Mr. Perkins. "I feel it's a case of moving further toward a police state."

Comprising the commission will be Judge Garth H. F. Moore, Judge of the County of York; Magistrate J. W. Butler, of Richmond Hill, and Mayor Thomas Broadhurst.

The commission has replaced council's police committee of Councillors Walter Scudis,
