Hill's 'Peyton Place'

 tainted by any form of sex crime," he pointed out.
 Judge Moore referred to certain statements made on television and quoting Chief Robbins and asked if he had said them.
 "These included the fact a father had been 'carrying on' with his daughter in Richmond Hill, a brother with his sister, and that a parent had given his son a case of beer on his 16th birthday."
 Chief Robbins said that this had occurred and that the statements were true.
 "In some cases," he said, "there is not enough evidence to prosecute but we still investigate the matter."
 The commission meeting got off to a somewhat agitated beginning as Chief Robbins at first hesitated to speak until he was informed whether it was an investigation or a hearing.
 "Is this a public inquiry?" he said, "or do you just want the air cleared on this matter?"
 Chief Robbins said he was not trying to be evasive but didn't want to put himself in a difficult position by talking "if this is a hearing, if it is I would want the opportunity to bring witnesses." He was criticized several times for appearing to fail to answer questions fully.
 Mayor Broadhurst said the commission was just trying to establish some facts.
 The chief later acknowledged that he was an "outsoken" person at times and "that in being that way you risk making a mistake sometimes. But I have four children in this town and I have too much at stake here to ever intentionally cast a slur on Richmond Hill. But if being honest is wrong," he said, "well then I guess I'm wrong."

AURORA: Town council has given permission for Consolidated Building Corporation to begin detailed preparations for its planned shopping mall in the north end of Aurora. Last year council approved the mall plan in principle and issued building permits to allow footings to be poured. As yet no actual work on the footings has been done, but the company hopes to begin work on the 152,000-square-foot project this summer.
