Quiz High School Bd., Tax Crisis

(Continued From Page 1) councillors that only four months' salaries at the higher rate were included in this year's budget. "The salary increase on our present offer is a quarter of a million dollars," he said. "Only one third of this is payable in 1967 but in 1968 the whole will be payable." Mr. Chapman also pointed out that in spite of increased provincial grants on capital construction, debenture payments on the new Thornlea School which is to be built this year, will add $50,000 to next year's budget. "The board can see assured increases of $200,000 next year," Mr. Chapman said, but added that he felt the board would welcome some direction from the councils as to whether the reserve should be set at half a mill per year or what. Reeve Plaxton suggested however that in trying to provide a cushion for next year, they perhaps were not doing residents of the municipality any favor. "Perhaps next year will be a crisis year," he said, "I don't know, but I think perhaps a crisis is the only thing that will bring action from the senior levels of government. The day has to come when someone has to say 'We would like to do it but we just haven't got the money'. There is going to have to be a ceiling put on it somewhere. We suggest a half mill or last year's surplus," he concluded.

Richmond Hill's Mayor Thomas Broadhurst, who chaired the meeting, suggested that the board discuss this item and advise the councils if they could reduce it.

Although the topic of the reserve fund was reverted to more than once, the balance of the meeting was devoted to questioning individual items in the high school board budget.

The $101,800 item for auxiliary services (psychological, guidance and attendance counselling) came under close questioning from Reeve Plaxton who noted that sums were included in the public school board budget for these and wanted to be sure there was no duplication of services.

It was explained that the shared services which are offered by the York South Regional Education Committee are contracted to participating boards on a per pupil basis. Although he was recalling the figures from memory, Mr. Chapman estimated that some 19,000 public, separate and secondary students were benefiting from psychological services and their boards were paying approximately $4.25 per student.

Similarly, participating boards paid about $3.25 per student for guidance counselling, although elementary school boards paid only for children in grades 7 and 8. As it had been found that attendance counselling for high school students takes twice as much time as for elementary pupils, the elementary boards pay $1 per pupil for this service and the high school board $2 per pupil in its system.

Markham Township Councillor Allan Sumner's only criticism of the budget was that it did not go into quite enough detail. Just another page could have provided enough explanation to have avoided such a meeting, he felt.

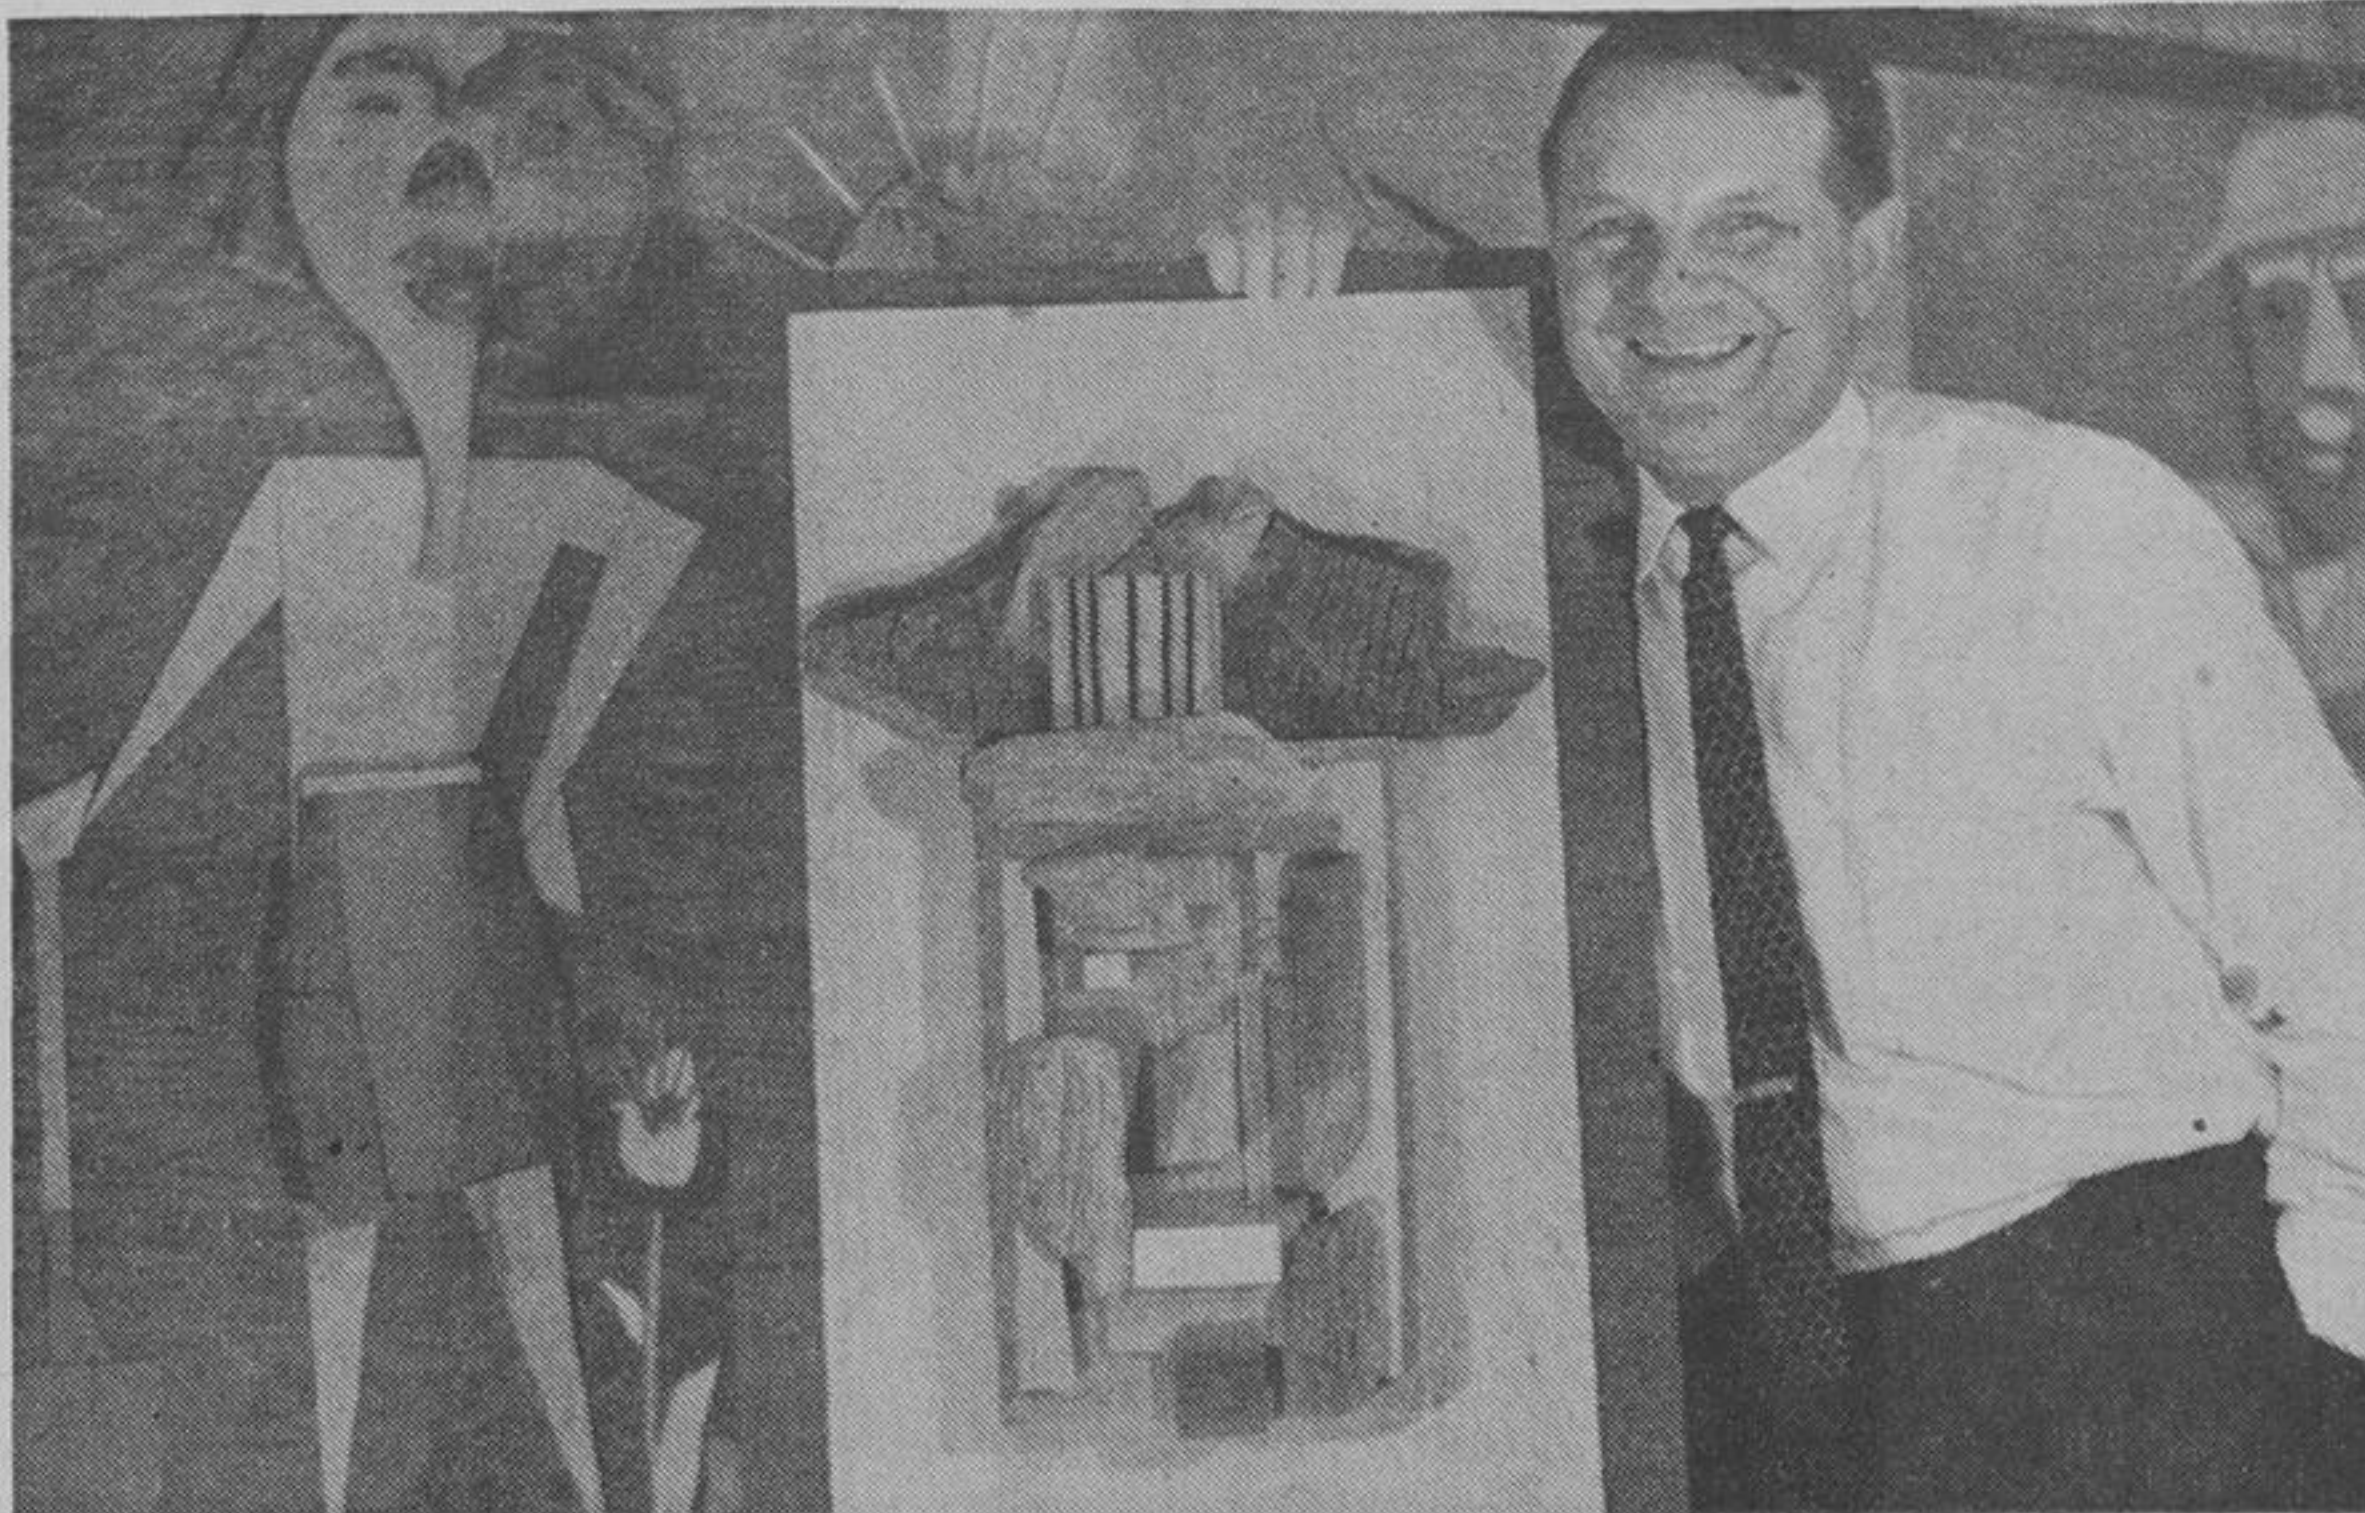

On a motion of Mr. Gadsby it was agreed that councils and school boards should meet three times a year, once for a budget meeting and twice for general discussion. Mr. Sumner's amendment for only two meetings a year ("The budget is done now, what else is there to discuss?") was defeated.

Mrs. Margaret Southwell of the high school board insisted that three meetings a year were justified. "You can't be at all our meetings when we go into this budget," she said. "If you want to have some idea of what is behind the budget and the work done on it by your school board, three meetings would be justified."

Mr. Bailey supported this, noting too that municipalities had a responsibility to keep the school board informed of pending developments, intimating that councils had much more responsibility on the acquisition of school sites. "Our township is making plans for the future this year and would have no objection to letting the high school board know where we are heading," he stated, to murmurs of approval from board members.

Mrs. Southwell further suggested that one of the three meetings should include a tour of one of the composite schools. "A good idea if in return the board members will take a trip over Vaughan's roads," quipped Mr. Broadhurst, in reply.

Although the motion to have three meetings was carried, no date was set up for the next meeting, nor was anyone given the responsibility of calling it.

Unique Art Form On Display

Abel Lee is shown above with some of his interesting wood constructions, a collection of which is currently on view at the Ruthe Calverley Gallery, 50 Yonge Street South.

Using the patterns and textures of woods as a painter uses oil colors, Mr. Lee creates fascinating compositions which may express an emotion, an idea or just a pleasant abstract arrangement. This is the first public showing of the pieces although Mr. Lee has had many one man shows of his monotypes in Sweden, Canada and the Netherland Antilles and has had work in group shows also in Estonia and the U.S. A native of Estonia, he now lives and has a studio in Maple.

Mackenzie May Seek 7th Term Tory Nominees Put In Quandary

The York Centre Conservative Association was thrown into something of a turmoil early this week when it appeared that veteran legislator Lex Mackenzie, 81, the oldest living member of the provincial legislature, may again seek the nomination. A release from the association president Al Hewitt April 17 had indicated that Mr. Mackenzie would not seek a seventh term. Since that time however, a group of Mr. Mackenzie's supporters called a meeting at his home in an endeavor to have him change his mind. At press time the outcome of the meeting was not known.

In the meantime, three other residents of Vaughan Township have indicated that they will definitely seek the nomination at the May 3 convention at Richmond Hill High School.

One of these is Lorne Wells, CA, a long time resident of Maple, well known for his participation in community affairs. The Wells family has been active in the political life of the area for many years. Lorne's grandfather, William James Wells was reeve of King Township and member of York County Council. His father, Arthur J. Wells, served as returning officer for the old provincial riding of York North from the early 1930's until his death in 1963.

Lorne Wells entered municipal politics as a candidate for Vaughan Township School Area Board, heading the polls in his first campaign in 1962 and again in 1964. Accepting chairmanship of the board in January 1965, he held this position until his retirement in December, 1966.

Mr. Wells is presently serving as a member of Vaughan Township Planning Board to which he was appointed in January of this year. He graduated from Richmond Hill High School in 1938 and served overseas with the RCAF during the war. He received his degree as a chartered accountant in 1951 and is associated with Tinkham, Wells and Company of Toronto.

Having served as chairman of finance for the Maple Community Centre and as district chairman of the York Central Hospital building campaign, Mr. Wells has maintained an active interest in public affairs. He is presently a trustee of Maple United Church, coach for the Maple Minor Hockey League, chairman of finance for 1st Maple Scout Troop and a charter member and past president of Maple Lions Club. He married Marjorie Bailey of Maple in 1948 and they have three children, Lorie, 15, Grant, 13, and George, 8 years old.

Don't Take Cars To Caravan Show

Richmond Hill Police Chief R. P. Robbins has urged local citizens to leave their cars at home during the Centennial Caravan visit here May 1 to 3, and to use public transportation. More than 20,000 people are expected to flow through Richmond Hill during the period the caravan is on display at Richmond Heights Centre. Chief Robbins said local police would be reinforced with extra men from the OPP at Oak Ridges, and from Vaughan and Markham Townships. He said cars would be towed away found in "no parking" areas near the centre.
