Don't Sell California Grapes Picketers Urge Supermarkets

The great California grape she said. solution would be for the unions to refuse to handle the grapes. Mrs. Bryant said that, while she expected the boycott to be successful, the most effective been made for more picketing.

The great California grape she said. solution would be for the unions to refuse to handle the grapes. Mrs. Bryant said that, while she expected the boycott to be successful, the most effective been made for more picketing.

Recently an attempt by the California growers to obtain an injunction against the Toronto City Council from proclaiming a day in support of the strikers was quashed in the courts. The leaders of the Richmond Hill picketers, Mrs. Beatrice Bryant of Richmond Hill and Archibald McGugan of Richvale said that their reception by the shoppers was friendly and their relations with the store managers "cordial" during the demonstration. Both are teachers and became interested in the plight of the California workers at the recent New Democratic Party leadership convention in Kitchener to which they were delegates. Jessica Govia, a migrant worker who is organizing the Toronto boycott, spoke at the convention. The Ontario NDP Party have endorsed the boycott.

Saturday's picketers were all NDP members. However, Mr. McGugan said he welcomed support from any part of the community. "This isn't an official political act," he said. "It's a matter of conscience and morality." "It's important for all people who work to help one another," said Mrs. Bryant. She added that the workers were largely Mexican-Americans and negroes who were being discriminated against by California whites with the tacit support of Governor Ronald Reagan. "It's about time we whites did something to help the people we have exploited in the past."
