Young Researchers Use New Library

The 468 children in kindergarten to grade 5 attending the Joseph A. Gibson Public School in Maple are making good use of the brand new library resource centre added to the school this year. Each class comes to the library as a unit once a week to hear book talks by Librarian Elizabeth Jackson and choose books for pleasure reading. But they come to the library on many more occasions for reference material in books, magazines and audio-visual supplies when working on a project.

Available for their use now are about 3,500 books, but there is lots of room in the stacks for many, many more
