he added. "We concentrate on the big national accounts where the volume business is to be found. Everybody from the salesman to the president works hard to make sure the customer gets exactly what he wants, that is an effective message in print."

Mr. Windsor said many of the old crafts are being taken over by machines and a big part of his job is to keep abreast of technological development but sees the real challenge and reward of his job in terms of working for and with people.

"All the machines in the world can't make up for people working together and committed to the old qualities of craftsmanship and excellence," he said. "People come first. Technology is only as good as the idea behind it."

Bridgen's has 170 employees working in the company. "Some of our people have worked here for 50 years and we're proud of them," said Ed Windsor.

As far as job opportunities are concerned Bridgen's maintains an apprentice system in the printing trades and most of the apprentices, who usually start between the ages of 18 and 21, stay on when their six-year training period is completed.

A FULL COMMUNITY LIFE

Ed and Edith Windsor moved to Thornhill in 1953 with their two sons Douglas and Wray. Doug attends Wellington College in Guelph, and has obtained his Bachelor of Science in zoology (honors). Wray plays Junior "C" hockey and attends grade 13 at Thornhill Secondary.

Since the move, Ed has repeatedly involved himself with community recreation. He was a member of the Thornhill Area Recreation Committee from 1955 to 1959, serving two years as treasurer and two years as chairman. He has been a member of the Vaughan Township Recreation Committee since 1957 and has served seven years as chairman. He has been a member of the Vaughan Township Committee of Adjustment since its inception in 1962.

"I've always been interested in boys' work," said Ed. "and have coached minor hockey teams since 1960."

Being coach of a very active peeewee team has allowed Mr. Windsor to travel to many places in Ontario and Quebec. He has travelled to Quebec, Goderich, Niagara Falls, Orillia, Barrie, Borden, Alliston, Newmarket, Aurora, Stouffville, Richmond Hill, Port Perry, Port Huron, Michigan, Montreal, Delhi, Milton, Penetang and Napanee. Mrs. Windsor accompanies her husband to most games and has taken a very active interest in minor hockey by being part of the cheering section and reporting game results to "The Liberal."

One of Ed Windsor's proudest possessions is a certificate awarded in 1967 by the Ontario Centennial Sports Festival for his performance as a coach in amateur athletics. That was the year his Thornhill peeewee team won the five championships including the national and Ontario championships. Besides coaching peeewees, he looks after the Thornhill Girls Hockey Team which he organized in 1967 which is now in its third season of operation and competes in the North York Girls League.

It is Mr. Windsor's belief that young people need some kind of molding between the ages of nine and sixteen.

"In my experience," he said, "athletics is the best available training for life. It teaches many things, but above all how to win and lose graciously."

In keeping with his belief in community, Ed has played an active role in Thornhill United Church. He was a member of the board of managers for six years, served two years as chairman and was a member of the session for four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Windsor have just come back from the annual Quebec Peeewee Tournament. This is the third trip with the peeewees for Ed Windsor. Congratulations on your appointment, Ed, and may you continue to be active in the community life of Thornhill.

In The Spotlight

the Bishop of Lax, arrives at the most inopportune time.

Miss Skillon, that pillar of middle-aged British maidenhood, inadvertently gets intoxicated while locked in a cupboard with the Vicar. In other words, the play contains all the major elements of English farce. The mistaken identity, the convenient hiding place — as far back as Chaucer these tricks have been used to produce comic effects, and where would Shakespeare have been without them? (Though with regard to the latter, I could never understand how a full-blooded man could roam around a forest with a full-blooded woman and not know she wasn't a boy — ah well, as you like it!)

In the Aurora Drama Workshop production, directed by Thelma Wrixon and produced by Les Shiner, the role of the Rev. Lionel Toop is being played by Michael Heptenstall, and his wife Penelope by Rose Dyson. The indomitable Miss Skillon will be played by Jean Shiner, and Ida, the maid, by Betty Shaw. Two other characters also seen in "Pool's Paradise" are the Rev. Arthur Humphrey and the Bishop of Lax, played by Geoffrey Pierpoint and Don Wilson respectively. Fred Codd will be seen as Corporal Clive, and Bill Soderman as the stranger, with Norm Stuart playing the policeman.

Handling publicity for the show is Pat O'Hara, and it is interesting to note that the posters advertising the production were executed by the junior members of the workshop.

To save a long distance call to Aurora, you may obtain tickets by calling Geoffrey Pierpoint at 833-6368. Curtain time is 8.15 pm, and admission $1.25.

We may be a long way off June, but the month notwithstanding, little theatre is bustin' out all over. February 13 will see the opening of another show, the Curtain Club's production of "The Loves Of Cass McGuire", directed by Tony Miller. In his opening address at a recent seminar on "Faces Of Ireland In The Eighteenth Century" at St. Michael's College, biographer and playwright Dennis Johnston referred to Brian Friel, author of the Curtain Club's current play as "the best of the new Irish playwrights". Better known among his works is "Philadelphia Here I Come", but "The Loves Of Cass McGuire", which incidentally is making its North American debut at the Curtain Club, is a dramatic comedy which merely needs more exposure to endear it to the hearts of audiences everywhere. In this play there is a gentle balance between pathos and comedy, and we never laugh at infirmity, rather we marvel at the courage which keeps these old people going. For character studies, this is a play which gives scope for some fine portrayals by the actors, and having watched a rehearsal the other night, I think the audiences will delight in the various performances.

"The Loves of Cass McGuire" runs February 13 - February 28, and tickets are obtainable from Yvette Steal, 884-7065.

Last spring I had the pleasure of meeting Madeleine Howarth when she was setting up a display of her husband's paintings at the Richmond Hill Public Library. Now it is her turn, and last weekend I wandered into the lower level of the library to view some of her work. Madeleine, or Maddy as she likes to be called, is a familiar figure at the York Farmers' Market every Saturday morning. It is here that she sets up her stall to exhibit the work of both her husband and herself. I understand that of late business has been brisk for them at the market.

Like her husband, she is mainly self-taught, but has been painting for upward of sixteen years. Maddy Howarth mainly produces what she describes as borderline abstracts, though she sticks to no particular subject. Her paintings include landscapes, figure studies and still-lives, all suggesting a concentration on form and design rather than realism.

I found her flower studies particularly stimulating with their vivid coloring and lively presentation. The exhibit at the library closes February 14.

He advised the board to investigate how much the developer paid for his land, how much it costs for services to make it a policy to buy land at the developer's cost when purchased, plus 10 percent yearly for interest, plus the cost of services.

"Keep to that policy — let others bend to you. Remember your approval is required before subdivision plans are approved. You have strong strings to pull."

Mr. Milani told the trustees, "While I am in business to make money, I have never expected to make profits on the sale of land for schools and I do not intend to do so in the future. This is the practice I followed in North York."

"Naturally, I hope this will mean that my plans will be looked on with more favor by the municipalities, but I hope that other developers will step forward in the same way and that this will become the pattern in York County."

He advised the board that he represents some 20 companies which control over 1,000 acres of land in the county and suggested that the board acquire cases, is that the person who discovers an injured animal by the roadside contact him at 889-1080 or 887-5562 or the municipal police and wait until help arrives. Do NOT handle the injured animal in the meantime.

Mr. Ryan reports that he has in the canine control kennels, at present, a loving and lovable aged German Shepherd type female, who is fat and looks well-cared for. The dog was hit on the side of the head by a car, but after veterinary care is now in fine condition and waiting for her owner to claim her.

If the owner or anyone knowing of someone who has lost such a pet will call 889-1080 or 887-5562, she will be delighted to be reunited with her family.

Three other stray dogs, all of whom have been involved in road accidents, are now receiving treatment in a veterinary clinic. There have been no claimants of these to date.

Mr. Ryan points out that in the near future, added to the perils to dogs who are permitted to run at large, will be a new and more serious one. When the new provincial legislation goes into effect, such dogs will be subject to confiscation after a limited number of hours in a pound. They will then spend the rest of their lives suffering in some laboratory.

NEWMARKET — "How are you suppose to get it home — on a magic wand?" With these words Provincial Court Judge Clare Morrison dismissed two cases against young men charged by Aurora Police with illegal possession of liquor in their automobiles. The men claimed they were taken the liquor home after having a drink at the home of friends.

Save Money - Rent Schools

Developer Tells Yk. Trustees

School boards could save 50 acres in his 1,000 acre holdings and offered to sell them to the board at his cost plus interest with no charges for services if the board would act within 90 days.

SERVICES ADD TO PRICE
This suggestion was in line with a recommendation made to the board by its acquisition of school sites committee on the same evening. The board agreed that a fund should be set up for purchase of sites. The fund, advised the committee, should not be more than one mill of the county's total equalized assessment, and the money would be used for down payments in proportion to the down payment paid by the subdivision. A mortgage would be given for the balance, with the time purchased outright at the time the subdivision is given final approval.

Mr. Milani agreed that quite an arrangement would be satisfactory to him. He stated that he had already offered staff a five acre site at Woodbridge for $1,000 per acre plus $3,000 for interest since his purchase four months previously, plus $20,000 for services. His firm, he said, paid $10,000, $12,000 and $13,000 per acre for the land.

Five acres would be large enough for a school site in this area, he said, and could probably be purchased for less if the board would settle for a narrower frontage. The land in question adjoins lowlands which are designated as parkland, and this could be used for playing fields. Mr. Milani declared, "Such an arrangement would reduce the cost of service by half."

As an alternative, he asked the board to consider a plan for renting schools which his firm would build to board's specifications.

Developers usually reinvest their money in shopping centres or factories, and could just as well invest it in a school.

Education Director Sam Chapman commented that present legislation did not permit this, but he was sure that if a developer put forward a firm proposal which was reasonably fair to the school board, it could get permission to go ahead with such a scheme.

LEVY FEE ON DEVELOPERS
The trustees agreed later in the meeting to present a brief to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the Minister of Education requesting power to levy a "dwelling unit" fee against developers to provide capital for the cost of school construction.

A similar request is being sent to the province from Peel County, which is facing a financial crisis in education. Peel County Board of Education blames the rapid development in the area for the present situation, and anticipates an additional 5,000 students this year because of new development.

It was unable to carry out its 1969 building program because of the capital aid fund from which school boards have been able to borrow funds at a comparatively low rate of interest, ran out half way through the year.

"This is the position we could find ourselves in in five years," said Mr. Chapman. "Where we get one subdivision proposed now, they are getting five."

It has been suggested in Peel that the board there should require a dwelling unit or lot fee of $2,300 from each developer, the approximate capital cost of one pupil space.

Mr. Ryan reports that he has in the canine control kennels, at present, a loving and lovable aged German Shepherd type female, who is fat and looks well-cared for. The dog was hit on the side of the head by a car, but after veterinary care is now in fine condition and waiting for her owner to claim her.

Animals Injured In Traffic Get Expert Care But Remain Unclaimed

At this season of the year there is a greater incidence of animals being injured by being struck by cars on the highways. The natural reaction of many people is to help the injured animal and attempt to move it or handle it to see how bad the injury is.

The result is often that the bitten person needs the Pasteur treatment.

This means that a dog with a broken back with no hope of recovering (and which could be humanely put to permanent sleep) must linger on in torture for two weeks.

The advice of Canine Control Officer James Ryan in such cases, is that the person who discovers an injured animal by the roadside contact him at 889-1080 or 887-5562 or the municipal police and wait until help arrives. Do NOT handle the injured animal in the meantime.
