

Goodhead Claims Error In Acreage Vaughan Twp. Signs New Agreement

It was back to the garbage dumps for Vaughan Township Council, at least for a short period, at its meeting February 16. The subject was one which has come up at council meetings frequently in the past five years — the Disposal Services Limited Sanitary Landfill Site, owned and operated by Norman Goodhead, former reeve of North York Township. The dump under consideration is located on the north side of the Teston Sideroad, east of Keele Street.

On November 21, 1966, township council signed a five year agreement with Disposal Services Limited for the operation and maintenance of a sanitary landfill site on approximately 60 acres of land zoned M-5.

During the latter part of 1968 council was requested to revise this agreement. The result was that another agreement was signed January 28, 1969, whereby Disposal Services Limited agreed to deed 63 acres to the township in consideration for increased height of fill.

A short time later Mr. Goodhead appeared before council in committee to state that an error had been made and that only 40 acres were to be used for sanitary landfill operations. He claimed he had intended that only those 40 acres be deeded to the township. The remaining 20 acres were to be left with Disposal Services to be used for a possible future industrial site.

Since that time several meetings have been held with the firm and Metro Conservation Authority in an attempt to resolve this matter. A solution was finally agreed on at a recent meeting of the township engineer and Mr. Goodhead, it was reported.

The new agreement will implement the following policy:

● That 43.492 acres be deeded to the township and that the due date for completion be June 30, 1972. (The original due date for the present agreement is June 30, 1973.)

● That a new plan for the area be presented with a top elevation of 1,000 feet. (The present elevation is 1,020 feet which allows a four to one slope from that elevation to encroach on the 20 acres in dispute.)

● That the 20 acres presently zoned M-5 be rezoned to agricultural as presently exists on the owner's remaining lands from the M-5 to Keele Street.

● The remaining portion of the township proceeding to permanent ditches, three feet of clean fill over the entire area, proper perimeter fences and deeding of a 27-foot widening on the north side of the Teston Sideroad, west of the sanitary landfill site, remain as in the existing agreement.

The township engineer was authorized to proceed with a new agreement, drawings and surveys based on the above policy.

Newton-Smith — Brown Nuptials Assumption Chapel

Assumption University Chapel, Windsor, was decorated with white mums and gladioli for the November 1 marriage of Sheila Helen Brown to John Richard Tincombe Newton-Smith. Both are working toward their master's degree in social work at the University of Windsor.

Officiating at the ceremony was the groom's father, Rev. J. W. Newton-Smith of Lindsay, formerly of the Anglican Church of St. Gabriel the Archangel, Richmond Hill East. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Brown of Sudbury.

Professor Morley Gluchen of Waterloo University and Robin Newton-Smith of Lindsay each accompanied himself on a guitar while singing two folk songs. The organist was Dave Bennett of Windsor, who played selections in keeping with the "Mod" wedding — "A White Shade of Pale", "Born Free" and "Age of Aquarius".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of hand crocheted wool in mini-length. Her floral headpiece and nosegay were of pink rosebuds and white baby mums. Her maid of honor was Gori Scarrow of Windsor who wore a pink mini-length dress.

The groom wore a flared leg mod suit and the best man was David Campbell of Orillia. The reception at St. Matthew's Anglican Church, the bride's mother received wearing pink shantung with matching accessories and a corsage of white roses and mums. The bridegroom's mother received wearing cranberry French wool crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of white mums and roses.

For a honeymoon in Michigan the bride wore a green wool jersey dress with matching coat of leather.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Newton-Smith are now living at 638 Sunset Street. Guests at the wedding included all faculty and members of the School of Social Work, University of Windsor, and relatives and friends from Owen Sound, Sudbury, Grimsby, Toronto, Lindsay, Orillia, Guelph, London and Kitchener.

Dog Owners To Get Copy Of Dog Bylaw

Richmond Hill Police will be asked to hand out a copy of the town's dog bylaw to each purchaser of a dog tag and the canine control officer will be requested to hand out a copy of the bylaw to people claiming their animals at the control centre. This was the decision of town council at its meeting February 16.

The decision was prompted by a request from a taxpayer that all dog owners be made aware of the conditions of the bylaw which forbids the running of dogs at large. The ratepayer had requested that the entire bylaw be published on the front page of "The Liberal".

Metro Police Citation For Dr. Jack Lindzon

His action in attempting to stop two fleeing bank robbers has won a third award for Thornhill dentist, Dr. Jack Lindzon of Alcano Crescent.

Last week Dr. Lindzon, who has his office in Agincourt, was one of 35 people who received civilian citations from the Metro Police Commission.

He was shot in the groin while chasing two men who had emerged from a bank at Sherbourne and Wellesley Streets carrying about $11,000.

Both men were captured and the money recovered. Dr. Lindzon spent ten days in hospital recuperating from his injury, and was not able to get back to work full time until the end of May, nearly two months after the incident.

He was earlier awarded $5,144.18 in compensation from the provincial government and received a $5,000 reward from the Canadian Bankers' Association.

Miniatures And Matadors At Oak Ridges Gallery

BY MARGARET LADE

The Purple Palette in Oak Ridges Plaza wasn't planned that way, really. It just grew from an idea that was altogether different.

After spending several years in retail management of other people's businesses, Mrs. Lorraine Winslow decided to strike out on her own.

She had travelled widely, lived in England, visited Europe — Paris and the Louvre, and the Channel Islands and she had a lively interest in art, although she does not consider herself an artist.

She does charcoal sketching as a hobby and "dabbled a bit in oils". Some of her charcoal landscapes hang in the back room of her gallery-gift shop.

and can be favorably compared with many created by noted artists.

Originally Mrs. Winslow intended to operate her business as an auction gallery but supply and demand in the area was not large enough, so she branched out and since last May, the Purple Palette has blossomed as a resale centre and gift shop.

The complete commode set in the front window is a real rarity white with blue, and including large basin, large and small pitchers, soap dish and soap tray, toothbrush holder and shaving mug, and a chamber with lid.

When you step inside and look around you think you are seeing the shop. There are room of her gallery-gift shop, brasses and ceramics, new and antique, Italian marble tables, swords and cameos, candles and tapers, a beautifully glazed matador and bull in shades of red to black, and novelty gift items.

A magestic Braham bull looks distastefully upon the scene from his place of honor on a shelf, and there are floral painting in oils on canvas and tile created by Artist Gerald Ottawa who is at present in Ottawa. They range from small to smaller to the tiniest miniatures, a contemporary challenge to the pre-Confederation prints that stand close by.

But the front shop is just the tip of the iceberg. You could spend hours browsing among the antiques and oddments and viewing the paintings and other works that Mrs. Winslow displays for local artists.

"People just love to come in and browse around," she said as she drew my attention to an old Georgian dresser with long swivel bevelled mirror. Of dark mahogany with hand carved decorative design, it has brass drawer pulls and each drawer has its individual lock.

There was an old oak bench that had been put together with wooden dowls, and an old wall clock made by one, Seth Thomas, in 1904 and still bearing the original price tag — $37.50.

There is an oil painting of Nantucket Dunes by Louis Herzog. It was exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts in New York in 1904, and is still in the old gallery frame.

The painting measures 36 inches by 48 inches, and is in need of some restoration work, but this will not be done, said Mrs. Winslow, until a buyer shows up who is willing to pay the price.

A real conversation piece is an old bamboo "whatnot" stand. Many people do not realize, said Mrs. Winslow, that there are many pieces of very old bamboo furniture around.

Pioneer carpenter tools hang from the ceiling, and there are appliances old and new to be found among the assortment of ancient furnishings and works of art.

All in all, the Purple Palette is an interesting and pleasant place in which to spend a few hours on a chilly afternoon.

Mrs. Winslow finds that her kind of customers do not usually shop at places like the Palette in the mornings, so she opens the door at 1 and stays open until 9 pm.
