 aged to take the equipment home with them, he said, and they respected it and enjoyed it. It always came back in good condition, he assured the trustees.

Adam Young, a second year teacher at St. Robert's Senior School in Thornhill, showed another type of microscope.

Before the microscopes were distributed to the children said Mr. Young, they were given lenses and designed their own microscopes using plasticine and other materials.

The enthusiasm engendered in learning to work out their own units of measurement, he said, carried through to the creation of their own microscopes. They learned about cell division, and examined amoeba and yeast cells and salt and sand, observing how living cells differed from dead cells.

By comparing tap water with pond water found in the vicinity of the school they learned about plant and animal life and the purification of water.

Animal life was also part of the science study in the elementary schools. He told the trustees, "They made their own notes, which served as their textbooks, and learned by their mistakes."

Not only did they develop scientific and mathematical skills, but they learned how to think. "The big thing is learning how to think."

Nicholas Van Bakel, principal of Our Lady Help of Christians School in Richmond Hill, was the third teacher. He spoke of the "science process approach" to environmental studies.

KITCHEN PHYSICS
 Two programs are in use. The first, OISE units, were developed by the Ontario Curriculum Institute, with scientists from the universities and teachers from the classroom involved in developing units for study of matter, measurement, microscopy and comparing animals. The committee has now become a part of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE) and today an additional five units are in preparation and will become available soon.

This program has now been taken over by the Ontario Teachers' Federation, explained Mr. Zupancic.

Other units used are the ESS (Elementary Science Study) units pioneered in developing materials that allow for the flow of ideas originating from the curiosity of the children.

The first five ESS units became available in 1966, and today more than 20 units are available through McGraw-Hill Company of Canada Limited.

Mr. Young described the ESS program as "kitchen physics". It involves a great deal of natural science, comparing dead leaves, live leaves, onion cells and other materials from the school yard and the home kitchen.

"Children learn how to work in a group and by themselves." He distributed sample work sheets used in the course. Each describes the experiment to be undertaken and asks for observations. Each student takes as long as he needs to complete the assignment, said Mr. Young, but he must complete one before he can go on to the next as the knowledge from one is essential to the understanding of the next.

NEW LABS PLANNED
 Staff recommended that science rooms be established in all schools where the OISE units are used. Water facilities and electrical outlets are essential, said the staff report. Large tables with heat and chemical-resistant tops are also needed, and storage space to display and lock valuable equipment is desirable.

It was stressed that the experiences of the young child as he attempted to find things out are often more important than what he discovers, that the learning of facts does not constitute an education in science. The interest of the children should determine their activities in science as much as possible and the role of the teacher should be to support with wise planning the child's attempts to understand the nature of the world.

More formal training in science, it was explained, comes at the secondary school level. Even if the whole program is revised, said Mr. Van Bakel, the children will have acquired the skills of the science process of enquiry, the intellectual tools to pursue the knowledge of science.

Because of greatly crowded conditions in the present church, the Richmond Hill Free Methodist Church is planning a relocation and enlargement program. The congregation was founded in 1954 by Rev. Earl Bull, a native of Richmond Hill. He became the first pastor of the local congregation which completed construction of its present church at the corner of Elmwood and Ruggles Avenues in 1956.

In the spring of this year the congregation purchased a beautiful two and a half acre property in the southeast corner of town — on Hillside Drive, just off Bayview Avenue.

Last Sunday afternoon, members of the congregation and friends turned out at the new site, in goodly numbers, on a beautiful autumn afternoon for the dedication ceremony of the new property and the unveiling of the sign which indicated the purpose for which the site will be used.

The dedication service was under the direction of Rev. Earl Bull, pastor and founder of the present church and at present the conference superintendent for the eastern area of the East Ontario Conference of the Free Methodist Church.

Those assembled for the impressive ceremony were led in the singing of "Lead On, O King Eternal" by Neil Nelles.

Plans are proceeding to begin construction of a new church on the new site on Hillside Drive in the early spring of 1971.

Sunday, October 18, marks the 100th birthday of the YWCA in Canada. The first YWCA was organized on this date in 1870 in the eastern city of St. John, New Brunswick.

To help celebrate this event the Richmond Hill and District YWCA invites you to participate in its Annual Walkathon. Official starting time is 9 am at Richmond Hill Arena. Families attending church or Sunday school are invited to join in at the half-way point at any time up to 1:30 pm.

There is still time! Pick up your sponsor sheet today or tomorrow at YWCA headquarters, 25 Yonge Street North in Richmond Hill.

The "Y's" walkathon is just one phase of the finance campaign launched October 11. Instead of a door to door canvas, the finance campaign committee has mailed letters to members of the YWCA and to industries throughout the district seeking their support to meet a $10,000 objective.

The YWCA last year provided 70 programs for 1,500 people. In addition 600 children were in programs sponsored by the Richmond Hill Parks and Recreation Committee and operated by the "Y". The "Y" also sponsored a variety of programs of interest to youth and adults.

If you are unable to walk you can help by sponsoring a walker or by sending a donation directly to the YWCA. Remember, by supporting the "Y" you support your community.

FIELD TRIPS HELP
 "Through the science process approach, students learn to use the intellectual tools of science. They learn to experiment, to formulate hypotheses and to test the greatest advantage to the programs now in the schools, he said, was that the children were directly confronted with the materials, rather than simply observing the teacher at work. The knowledge was not delivered verbally, or taken from books, and even the slowest learners progressed more rapidly."

"I think this is the method for teaching science for years to come."

He spoke of the "earth science program, the delicate inter-relationship in nature."

Through their studies, the children learn to appreciate this, to want to conserve it.

There are many outdoor sites that could be used for scientific learning, said Mr. Van Bakel. He suggested the developing of a teachers' guide to the county so that every teacher would know where to find suitable material and arrange field trips.

The teachers agreed that field trips were a great aid in supplementing the classroom materials. Films, tapes and education radio television are also aids to the teaching of science.

Mr. Van Bakel urged the board to seriously consider establishing a model science laboratory to be used by teachers for in-service training, curriculum development and as a resource centre for teachers.

Mr. Zupancic explained that disciplines are tied into the science course including mathematics and the language arts, observing, classifying, using space/time relationships, using numbers, measuring, communicating, predicting and inferring.

SELF-EVALUATION
 Mr. Zosky distributed self-evaluation sheets which the children complete to assess their performance in working with others and in working alone.

"The children are usually very very honest with themselves," The sheets were for the children, not the parents, he said. If a child wished to take his sheet home he might do so, but it was basically something between the child and the teacher, and its purpose was to help the child to understand and improve his own attitudes and performance.

Reporting to the parents was part of the program, and parents were welcome to visit the school, to talk to the teacher at any time, said Mr. Zosky.

Since the county board was formed in January 1969, it has been spending $5,000 a year, gradually putting units into the schools, and there are now five laboratories in the county.

Staff recommended that money be provided in the budget to compete the OISE and ESS units during the 1971 budget year.

It also recommended that consideration be given in 1972

Jehovah's Witnesses Foresee 70's Change
 "Who Will Conquer the World in the 1970's?" This was the title of the main discourse heard by 2,023 Jehovah's Witnesses on the final day of a three-day Bible education seminar held recently at Sir John A. MacDonald Collegiate on Pharmacy Avenue in Scarborough.

After studying the prophecies of Jesus concerning the end of this system of things, which gave descriptions that match precisely the conditions we observe today, those attending the seminar reached the conclusion that "We can expect world conquest very soon by God's heavenly kingdom — to be followed by a 1,000 year reign of peace and happiness on this earth."

Another highlight of the weekend's activity was the baptism service in which 18 of the local residents who have studied the Bible in a systematic course symbolized their wish to become known as Jehovah's Witnesses. This service took place Saturday morning.
