Physical Education More Than Fun And Games

BY MARGARET LADE

The importance of physical education in the school curriculum was stressed in a report presented to trustees at a recent meeting of York County Roman Catholic School Board by the board's Physical Education Consultant Jerry Sorochan.

The report on physical education was the fifth of a series that has been presented to the board over the past few months, providing description in detail of various phases of the curriculum in the Roman Catholic schools of the county

SUNDAY, JANUARY 10, 1971

In his introduction, Mr. Sorochan quoted from Aristotle, "The body is the temple of the soul, and to reach harmony of body, mind and spirit, the body must be 'physically fit'."

Rev. J. H. Patterson, B.A., B.D. "Becoming physically edu-Organist and director of music cated means more than becoming a member of the basketball team or a cheerleader or learning how to play games," said Mr. Sorochan. "The physically educated person knows the role of physical activity in mental health. He knows that physical activity is a welcome change from intensive mental activity and is an important feature of balanced living.

"Through physical education," he continued, "you learn to understand your body, to move more efficiently, how to develop skills, you learn correct sitting, standing, walking and running which will contribute to your appearance and co-ordina-

A goal of physical education, he said, is to develop social qualities — sportsmanship, co-operation and consideration for others. Its overall goal is the same as that of all education — a healthy mind in a healthy

"It is most important to realize that we are teachers of children, and not teachers of a subject, and that physical education will have a profound and beneficial effect upon all children," declared Mr. Sorochan.

He detailed the education intentions of various phases of the program in providing movement, performance and social education as well as body development, the promotion of physical health, and of responsibility to ones own health through acquiring health habits.

The program should also contribute to the child's discovery of his world and the qualities of his world and his place within it, preparing the child for enjoyment of labor and leisure in adult life.

"There is no education complete without physical education, for moving is the base of becoming acquainted with the world and with yourself," Mr. Sorochan told the trustees.

Speaking of the physical facilities in the schools, Mr. Sorochan reported that the gymnasium, playrooms and general purpose rooms in most of the board's schools are very good. "The individual boards before amalgamation (in January 1969) deserve congratulations for the facilities they have provided as well as the present board for the contribution it is making toward the improvement of facilities for physical education. The facilities are adequate for instruction as well as for a variety of uses mainly the stage facilities. All areas, including the stage will be utilized to utmost advantage in the physical education program."

Outdoor facilities are excellent as well, he added, with large play areas that enhance the outdoor portion of the program. Blacktop areas, too, can be used for many outdoor games during physical education classes, extra curricular activity periods, and during recess.

Reporting on equipment, Mr. Sorochan observed, "Several schools have some large apparatus, items such as climbers, vaulting horses, ladders, springboards, ropes and balance benches. One has only to watch children of all ages at play to appreciate that climbing and jumping is a natural activity for all normal children. Through climbing and jumping activities, children experience a sense of adventure, develop courage and are able to use initiative.

"Climbing and jumping activities provide the opportunity for all-round development in muscular strength far exceeding that which can be achieved through free standing exercises." He added, however, "Many of the schools are under equipped in this area." Each school should have a minimum supply of basic consumable equipment such as sponge balls, utility balls, hoops, bean bags and skipping ropes as well as other small items. "A minimum quantity of equipment is necessary to ensure more activity per skill development per child. Activity is increased where one piece of equipment is available for each child."

Some schools in the county, said Mr. Sorochan, have sufficient equipment, but others have very little.

He pointed out that the size of the school is not a determining factor in purchasing equipment because it is the class size rather than the overall school population that determines the amount of equipment required, therefore the same basic amount of equipment is needed for each school. The board provided $8,500 for such equipment in its 1970 budget.

This money, Mr. Sorochan continued, should purchase almost all of the basic consumable equipment needed, and it is being distributed on the basis of need. When each school has the minimum of equipment there will still be need to maintain this level, as there is always loss through wear or break-Other more expensive equipment and apparatus he suggested could be built up over a year or more. Mr. Sorochan suggested that in the spring games such as hopscotch could be painted on the blacktop areas of the playground, Basketball and volleyball courts could also be painted outside so that they could be used by the children before and after school and during re-Other creative games in which the children follow a path of a snake or snail not only provide recreation, but also help teachers in detecting children with perceptual handicaps said the board's Assistant Superintendent John Zupancic. * * * *

Mr. Sorochan told the trustees there is a kit of about 800 cards of programmed physical education activities for children from kindergarten to grade 6 available to assist teachers and principals in preparing a physical education program. Researched and developed by the Educational Research Council of America it is useful as a guide until the board can develop its own program for the sys-

He again emphasised the importance of movement education, including games, rhythmics, creative dramatics as well as individual activities such as track and mary children, integrating spelling, geography, fold dances and creative dances for teachers.

"A group of us worked on it," he explained. Throughout the year there will be a number of inservice sessions for teachers, taking the form of demonstration lessons, workshops and clinics. These will be done collectively with a number of schools participating and in individual schools with only the staff or individual teachers. The purpose of these sessions will be to acquaint the teachers with specific parts of the program, for example a lesson in education gymnastics where no equipment is used, or in track and field where new methods or old methods are refined and perfected.

Inservice sessions, Mr. Sorochan explained, may be demonstrated using a class of students, or by having the teachers act as the students and learn by doing. Plans for 1971 include formation of a curriculum committee for physical education so that more guidance can be provided for the teachers in the York County Roman Catholic Schools. Another important area of planning, said Mr. Sorochan, would be the organization of an athletic council to provide the children of the system a schedule of athletic events to which they can look forward.

"These events," he suggested, "would take the form of invitational tournaments where all the schools can participate if they so desire. Some of the activities may include volleyball, basketball and track and field."

Each school wishing to do so, Mr. Sorochan continued, could have a playday or a tabloid meet with all of the children in the school taking an active part.

There are still difficiencies in the program for grades 7 and 8, he told the trustees. He would like to see more emphasis given to such activities as badminton, golf and other games for individuals as well as teams. Such activities are important to prepare the young people for the increased leisure of the modern society. * * * * *

Mr. Sorochan recommended a five year plan for bringing all schools up to a desirable level, spending $7,500 a year for five years for capital equipment, for a year period.

Some trustees questioned the need for trampolenes, the most expensive item on the list at $800. They were told that a trampolene is "very very useful", particularly in classes for perceptually handicapped children.

Asked about the possibility of adding swimming to the program, Mr. Sorochan said it would be a good thing, but in most areas no qualified instructors are available during school. The exception is at Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Sharon. A teacher at that school takes the children to a private pool in Vandorf for swimming instruction.

Skiing also was not practical, Mr. Sorochan continued, because of the cost of providing equipment for every child

Describing the function and duties of a physical education consultant, Mr. Sorochan explained that he is concerned with material facilities and the operation of the program in the schools, improving the teaching and learning situation. There are also office and administrative duties involved, filing, working out budgets, planning for new facilities, drawing up timetables and schedules of visits to schools, reading current literature on health and physical education and keeping up with the times. Health education, he said, is primarily the responsibility of the classroom teacher who co-operates with the York County Health Unit and the school health nurses. The consultant acts as a clearing house for ideas, a co-ordinator between schools, meets with superintendent and board from time to time interpreting the program and reporting to the board when required. The consultant visits the teachers in the gymnasium in regular scheduled periods, evaluating the program in progress and offering suggestions for the improvement of programs. The consultant also runs demonstrations, work shops, inservice dealing with specific parts of the program, advises principals regarding timetabling of periods and
