Markham Historical Museum

Looking For Something To Do During The Winter Break?

On Friday school children will be released for a 10-day winter break and by the middle of the next week frantic mothers will be looking for something to do to amuse the children.

Perhaps they might like to visit the new Markham Historical Museum.

It is located in the old Mount Joy Schoolhouse and in it has been assembled the nucleus of an excellent and interesting collection that's intended to tell the story of Markham Township from 1794 to the present day. The building, built in 1907, is a two-storey brick edifice and is presided over by John Lunau, a hockey trainer with the NHL, who is curator and founder of the museum located in the old school at the north end of the former Town of Markham's main street.

John Lunau's roots in Markham Township go back to its earliest days. One of his ancestors, Joachim Lunau came with William Bercey to the township in 1794.

William Bercey was a talented artist, architect and engineer, who brought a large group of German artisans and peasants from Hamburg to settle in the township, after a brief stay in the State of New York. The settlement did not thrive as illness struck the settlers and settlement duties, which included the clearing of a road from York to Markham, were not completed. The land grant was cancelled and the surviving settlers took up land in the vicinity for themselves.

Bercey himself lived there only a short time. He built a number of the first houses in what was to become the Village of Markham and eventually moved to Montreal where he established a reputation as an artist. His paintings are now collectors' items.

A few years later, following the "Trail of the Black Walnut" Mennonite Pennsylvania Germans arrived in the area and were attracted to Markham Township because of the already large number of German settlers.

Thus the Township of Markham acquired a unique character in its early days, from these hard-working good farmers, who believed in using the land to the best advantage and in replacing the nutrients removed by the crops. Plain but substantial homes, farm buildings, churches and schools were set in a verdant countryside, and the people co-operated in helping each other make a success of their farming life.

This unique quality, which saw few names of English, Irish or Scottish derivation in the township, remained until the recent influx of another generation of settlers, the commuters. German names like Reesor, Lunau, Stouffer, Eckardt, Stiver, Wideman, Steckley and Heise were common, although the township was named

Beware Of Pyramid TV Selling Techniques

Every once in a while the "pyramid" selling plan rears its ugly head and flourishes until its victims learn from sad experience that the beautiful gold that glitters so attractively in the salesman's presentation is only dross.

We have heard that salesmen are busy in this area with a "pyramid" selling plan for color TVs, which promises the purchaser a $50 commission on every sale made from 15 referrals. An added $50 is promised for the referrals of the referrals, making a very enticing total available, according to the salesman.

It would appear that the price of the TV set is exorbitant in the first place, but the sales pitch indicates that the buyer could not only pay for the set in referrals, but end up with a substantial amount of cash also.

The only contract signed is one with a finance company at a high rate of interest, bringing the total cost of the set to $1,500.

In most pyramid promotions, the only person to make any money is the promoter, those who purchase ending up with a big bill and none of the prophesied returns. We would wager that this would be the case in this deal.

If you are contemplating such a purchase, ask for time for consideration. No legitimate dealer will refuse this. Check the quoted price with another dealer. Seek the advice of your bank manager or another financial adviser and above all do not make the purchase on the promise of financial returns, which in all probability will never occur.

Don't be a patsy!

Markham in 1793 in honor of the Anglican Archbishop of York, England, by Lieut.-Governor John Graves Simcoe.

But let's get back to the new museum, which is open daily, except Sunday, from 1:30 to 4:30 pm. Mr. Lunau, who can be reached at 294-4463, is still busy gathering and arranging material and a great deal of material he will be happy to show you is from his personal collection. He's always grateful for pictures, documents and artifacts of historic interest, particularly to Markham residents.

In the large hallway is an 1833 circus poster, advertising the coming of a circus to the village. It shows a performer trying to open the jaws of a huge lion with frightening oversized teeth. The poster notes, "The performance cannot adequately be described within the limitations of this bill."

There are scores of interesting photographs, documents, household and farm implements, school desks and books — some of them in German. There's one deed for a farm, dated 1830, which bears in its bottom corner the notation: W. L. Mackenzie, Printer.

This was the fiery little rebel of Upper Canada, William Lyon Mackenzie, publisher of the Colonial Advocate, who was one of the leaders of the Rebellion of 1837 and who fled to the United States after a skirmish at Montgomery's Tavern. After several years of exile, when an amnesty was granted, Mackenzie returned to Toronto and was elected to the Legislative Assembly.

Also in the museum is an 1860 map of York County, on which is marked near Newmarket, "The Toronto-Georgian Bay Ship Canal." Drive up to Holland Landing and you can still see the stone walls and installations for this ambitious project which was never completed.

Another historically interesting spot to visit within easy driving distance is the Sharon Temple, the big white birthday cake of a building located a couple of miles east of Newmarket.

In The Spotlight

we found that they were two friends who hadn't seen each other since childhood. One has been married twenty-five years — "You poor blighter," says the other and they reminisce for a moment. The audience of children just lapped it up and clapped the duo on their backs as they stepped off the stage. One thing about children, you'll always get an honest reaction to another's attempt at humor. I was impressed.

The last exercise of the evening involved all the children on stage in a circle. Art passed an imaginary tray of food around and each child took what he wanted most. Then Art asked each, one at a time, to eat his portion and let the other ones guess what it was. There were watermelons, pizzas, bananas, oranges and coconuts. It was almost too easy. But one chap had everyone stumped. He picked his food up between forefinger and thumb, crunched down on it and snapped his head back. Blank faces all the way around. "We give up, we give up. What is it?" "Bullets, I want my hair to grow in bangs". Groan . . . (the kids know an old one when they hear it.)

The overall feeling or impression I'm left with, is one of enjoyment. The young "Burtons and Taylors" (don't any little girls have short hair these days?) thoroughly enjoyed themselves. They'd learned something about thinking things through before bumbling on in and they'd loved every minute of it. They clustered around Art as he tried to put on his jacket. "All right you clowns, pick up all your gum wrappers and head out of here. I've gotta get home sometime before morning."

This all happens every Monday night from 7 pm until approximately 8.45 pm at the Curtain Club, rear of 25 Yonge Street North. If you can stand the noise and have a few moments to spare, drop in . . . the kids love an audience.
