Board of Education chairman Arthur Starr, trustee for Stouffville-Whitchurch. "We feel that discipline is the responsibility of the principal, and so far there have been no complaints. I don't think it (the strap) is used very much, and if it was misused or abused we would hear about it." Roman Catholic Board Chairman Eugene Jacobs, trustee for Vaughan, says his board has considered setting up a committee of teachers, trustees and administrators to study the whole question of discipline.

Since the regional boards were formed in 1969 both York boards have followed guidelines set out three years ago by the Department of Education. The directive from the department said discipline in the schools should be in keeping with discipline that might be enforced by "a kind, firm and judicious parent."

"We have had no problems so far," said Mr. Jacobs. "If a situation does develop that requires it, we will establish policy, but often policy is made when none is required."

Board of Education Director Sam Chapman agrees, "Essentially we have considerable faith in the people in our schools. If you cannot trust the people in the schools to handle discipline, then we have the wrong people in the schools."

If a teacher or principal showed lack of judgement, said Mr. Chapman, steps would be taken to correct the situation.

Roman Catholic Board Superintendent Joe Hodge reports that so far there have been no complaints to administration.

is used, said Mr. Hodge, it does act as a deterrent, and principals seem to be using good judgement in the matter of discipline. A teacher with a vicious tongue can do more damage to a child than a strapping, provided the strap is judiciously applied, he observed. The board does not permit the abuse of a child by strapping or in any other way,

Mr. Hodge continued. 'A child has a dignity, too, and we cannot destroy this Each child has to be treated differently, but discipline has to be consistent."

Many parents prefer that disciplinary action be taken by the school rather than having the problem thrown back at them.

An habitually unruley child has to be restrained, said Mr. Hodge, and if the strap is taken out of the schools, the only alternative, when all else has failed would be suspension. Difficult children usually come from homes with problems, he explained, and to send the child home for two or three days would not do much to improve his behaviour, but sometimes the school has no choice when a child gets out of hand. The strap is used only with approval of the principal, and only in the presence of witnesses. York County Elementary Teachers Association and Federation President Susan Shepe, a teacher at Henderson Public School in Thornhill, says the teachers have no concerted opinion at this

"We have been going by department guidelines, and this seems to be satisfactory. The strap has not become an issue yet, and we hope it will
